The sections of the old Code of 1859, relating to joinder of causes of action (ss. 8 and 9), have not been re-enacted in the later Codes.

1.——— Nature and value of suit as affecting joinder of causes of action—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 8.—Under s. 8 of the Code of 1859 it was decided that the words "cognizable by the same Court" referred to the nature of the suit and not to its value; therefore a Principal Sudder Ameen was held to have jurisdiction under that section to try a suit for land and for mesne profits, the entire claim not exceeding his jurisdiction, although the value of the suit, so far as the claim was for land, was below the value cognizable by him. 16. ———— Suit for specific performance and return of money advanced on agreement—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 44—Misjoinder.—The plaintiffs sued for specific performance of an agreement in writing which set forth, inter alia, that the defendants had agreed to sell, etc., under "certain conditions as agreed upon." Part of the purchase-money had been advanced by the plaintiffs to the defendants, for which the defendants had given their promissory notes; and the plaint contained a prayer that the defendants be ordered to pay over the amount of the notes. Held (affirming the decision of WILSON, J.) that there was no misjoinder of causes of action within the meaning of s. 44, rule (a), of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act X of 1877). 17. ———— Suit for administration and accounts of separate estates—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 44.—The plaintiffs, who were the widow and daughter of A, sued the executors of the will of A's father (B) for administration and account. There were four distinct subjects of claim in the plaint, viz., (1) the estate of A.s great-grandfather, (2) the estate of A's grandfather, (3) the jewels and ornaments which formed the stridhan of A's mother which were in A's possession at the time of his death, (4) a sum of R1,90,000 which it was alleged that B had settled on A at the time of his marriage. Subsequently to the filing of the suit, the first plaintiff amended the plaint and claimed the jewels and ornaments, which formed the subject-matter of the third claim, as her own property, alleging that they had been presented to her on the occasion of her marriage. The plaint prayed (1) for the declaration that a certain portion of the estate in the hands of the first three defendants had been ancestral property in B's hands, (2) for an account and administration, (3) that the jewels and ornaments should be delivered up. Held that there was a misjoinder of causes of action, having regard to the provisions of rule (b), s. 44 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877). Part of the claim in the plaint was for a portion of A's estate, and was founded upon the plaintiff's alleged right as heir of A. The other portion of the claim in the plaint—viz., that relating to the ornaments—had no reference to A's estate, and was personal to the first plaintiff herself. The three offences were committed within one year of each other, and M was charged and tried at the same time for the three offences. Held that such joinder of charges was irregular, inasmuch as the combination of three offences of the same kind for the purpose of one trial can only be where such offences have been committed in respect of one and the same person, and not against different prosecutors, within the period of one year, as provided in the Criminal Procedure Code. 14. ——— Charge of three offences of the same kind—Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), s. 234.—An accused was charged with criminal breach of trust as a public servant in respect of three separate sums of money deposited in the savings bank under three separate accounts. The third of these charges related to the misappropriation of R195 composed of two separate sums of R150 and R45 alleged to have been misappropriated on the 16th and 25th November, respectively. These sums the accused in his statement at the trial stated he had paid over on those dates to the depositor, and produced an account book showing entries of such payments on those dates. This statement was proved to be untrue, and the accused was convicted. On an application to quash the conviction on the ground that the trial had been held in contravention of s. 234 of the Code of Criminal Procedure,—Held that the entries in the account books did not clearly show that the misappropriation of the sum of R195 took place on two dates, or consisted of two transactions, the entries having been made for the purpose of concealing the criminal breach of trust; and that, under the circumstances, the criminal breach of trust with regard to the R195 was really one offence and could be included in one charge. At the trial before the District Judge sitting with assessors, the Court informed the prisoner that the trial would be confined to the three charges last mentioned. The prisoner was convicted on these, but the Court allowed evidence to be adduced by the prosecution on all the remaining charges, and in respect of these the prisoner was acquitted. On appeal to the High Court,—Held that the District Judge should have exercised the powers conferred on him by ss. 445 and 446 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and then have proceeded to hold separate trials; that he should not have tried together the charges under ss. 167 and 466 of the Penal Code, as the offences were not of the same kind within the meaning of s. 453 of the Code of Criminal Procedure; but the convictions on these charges were upheld, as it did not appear that the prisoner had been prejudiced by the mode of trial adopted. 17. ——————— Interest in case—Judge as a witness.—The jailor of a district jail being accused by one of the jail clerks of falsifying his accounts and defrauding the Government, the matter was enquired into by the District Magistrate, and the jailor was, by the Magistrate's order, placed on trial before a Bench of Magistrates consisting of the District Magistrate himself, L, the Officiating Superintendent of the Jail, and three other Honorary Magistrates. The prisoner and his pleaders were alleged to have stated before the commencement of the trial, on being questioned, that they had no objection to the composition of the Bench, but after the charges had been framed, the prisoner's counsel objected to the Bench as formed. The District Magistrate directed the Government pleader to prosecute, and both the District Magistrate and L gave evidence for the prosecution. After the case for the prosecution was closed, two formal charges were drawn up, namely, that the prisoner had debited Government with the price of more oil-seed than he actually purchased, and that he had received payment for certain oil at a higher rate than he credited to Government. The moneys, the receipt of which were the subject of the first charge, were obtained by the prisoner on the strength of certain vouchers which he had induced L to sign as correct, and L had sanctioned the sale at the rates credited to Government. Upon the prisoner's giving the names of the witnesses he intended to call in his defence, L was deputed by his brother Magistrates to examine some of them who were connected with the jail, in order "to guard against deviation," and the depositions so taken were placed on the record "to be used by either party, though not themselves as evidence." The prisoner was convicted. On a motion to quash the conviction.—Held that L had a distinct and substantial interest which disqualified him from acting as Judge. Held, further, that although a Magistrate is not disqualified from dealing with a case judicially merely because in his character of Magistrate it may have been his duty to initiate the proceedings, yet a Magistrate ought not to act judicially in a case where there is no necessity for his doing so, and where he himself discovered the offence and initiated the prosecution, and where he is one of the principal witnesses for the prosecution. They are not applicable to the case of a vacancy caused by a person appointed to act as a Judge, under the provisions of the second part of the abovementioned section, ceasing to perform the duties of such office. The words above quoted further mean that the power conferred by s. 7 must be exercised within a reasonable time, that is to say, a practicable time after the happening of a vacancy. It cannot be held that the power conferred by the abovementioned section can be held in suspense for several years and then be legally exercised. Where a person had in fact for a period of more than a year been exercising all the functions of a Judge of the High Court in virtue of an appointment purporting to be made by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and Chief Commissioner of Oudh, under sanction of Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, it was held that though, so far as the validity of the appointment depended upon the provisions of ss. 7 and 16 of the 24 & 25 Vict., c. 104, the appointment was apparently ultra vires, it must nevertheless be presumed, in the absence of fuller information, that the appointment was legally made in the exercise of some power, unknown to the Court, vested in the Secretary of State for India. Appellate Court—Dismissal of suit—Findings unnecessary for disposal of case—Appeal by successful party—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 203.—When a suit has been dismissed on the merits in the Court of first instance, and that decision is upheld by the District Judge on appeal, merely on the ground of non-joinder, the District Judge should not record any findings in the appellant's favour on the merits of the case; and, if he does so, such findings will, on second appeal to the High Court, be expunged from the record. 47. ——— Form of judgment on appeal—Judgment not in conformity with law—Dismissal of appeal—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 551, 574.—The lower Appellate Court, in disposing of an appeal from a decree of the Munsif, recorded the following judgment: "Suit laid at R480, value of buffaloes. Appeal rejected under s. 551 of the Civil Procedure Code." Held that this was not a judgment in conformity with law. The dismissal of an appeal under s. 551 of the Civil Procedure Code by a Court whose decision may be the subject of an appeal does not relieve the Court from the necessity of writing a judgment which, according to the provisions of s. 574 of the Code, should show the points raised, the decision upon those points, and the reasons for deciding them. 48. ——— Applicability of provisions as to first appeals—Remand—Judgment of first Appellate Court—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 574, 578.—The judgment of a lower Appellate Court, after setting forth the claim, the defence, the nature of the decree of the first Court, and the effect of the pleas in appeal, concluded, with general observations, as follows: "The point to be determined on appeal is whether or not the decision is consistent with the merits of the case. The Court, having considered the evidence on the record and the judgment of the Munsif, which is explicit enough, concurs with the lower Court. . . . . The finding arrived at by the Munsif, that the plaintiff's claim is established, is correct and consistent with the evidence. The pleas urged in appeal are therefore undeserving of consideration." Held that this was in law no judgment at all, inasmuch as it did not satisfy the requirements of s. 574 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that the decree of the lower Appellate Court must therefore be set aside, and the record returned to that Court for a proper adjudication, in accordance with the provisions of that section. Mahadeo Prasad v. Sarju Prasad, Weekly Notes, All., 1886, p. 171, referred to. 49. ——— Judgment of High Court—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 574, 633—"Substantial question of law"—Contents of judgment—Rules made by High Court under s. 633 for recording judgments.—The intention of the Legislature as expressed in s. 633 of the Civil Procedure Code was that the High Court might frame rules as to how its judgments should be given, whether orally or in writing, or according to any mode which might appear to it best in the interests of justice. The section does not merely give the High Court power to direct that judgment shall be recorded in a particular book or with a particular seal. Rule 9 of the rules made under s. 633 in March 1885 is therefore not ultra vires of the Court, and it modifies the provisions of s. 574 in their application to judgments of the High Court. With reference to the terms of Rule 9, it is not necessary, in a case where the High Court substantially adopts the whole judgment of the Court below, to go through the formality of re-stating the points at issue, the decision upon each point, and the reasons for the decision. Per EDGE, C.J.—Apart from Rule 9, it never was intended that s. 574 of the Code should apply to cases where the High Court, having heard the judgment of the Court below and arguments thereon, comes to the conclusion that both the judgment and the reasons which it gives are completely satisfactory, and such as the High Court itself would have given. Assuming the provisions of s. 574 to be applicable, a judgment of the High Court stating merely that the appeal must be dismissed with costs and the judgment of the first Court affirmed, and that it was unnecessary to say more than that the Court agreed with the Judge's reasons, is a substantial compliance with those provisions. The judgment of the High Court in a first appeal was as follows: "This appeal must, in my opinion, be dismissed with costs, and the judgment of the first Court affirmed; and I do not think it necessary to say more than that we agree with the Judge's reasons." The appellant applied for leave to appeal to Her Majesty in Council on the

In the circumstances of the case, the omission of the Magistrate in recording a judgment before pronouncing his sentence was an omission or irregularity which fell within the purview of s. 537 of the Code. even illegally, or without believing in good faith that he had jurisdiction to do the act complained of. Where the act done or ordered to be done in the discharge of judicial duties is without the limits of the officer's jurisdiction, he is protected if, at the time of doing or ordering it, he in good faith believed himself to have jurisdiction to do or order it. The word "jurisdiction" is used in Act XVIII of 1850 in the sense in which it was used by the Privy Council in Calder v. Halket, 2 Moore's I. A., 293. It means authority or power to act in a matter, and not authority or power to do an act in a particular manner or form. A judicial officer who in the discharge of his judicial duties issues a warrant which he has authority to issue, though the particular form or manner in which he issues it is contrary to law, acts within, and not without, the limits of his jurisdiction in this sense. Where a Magistrate of the first class, having sentenced an accused person to three years' rigorous imprisonment and R500 fine under ss. 379 and 411 of the Penal Code, and having issued a warrant, purporting to act under s. 386 of the Criminal Procedure Code, for the levy of the fine by distress and sale of cattle belonging to the accused, sold such cattle before the date fixed for the sale, and in contravention of form 37, sch. V and s. 554 of the Code, and form D in ch. V of the circular orders of the High Court,—Held that he was acting in the discharge of his judicial duty within his jurisdiction as a Magistrate of the first class; that under such circumstances it was immaterial that he did not in good faith believe himself to have jurisdiction to sell the property in the manner he did; and that the fact that he acted with gross and culpable irregularity did not deprive him of the protection afforded by Act XVIII of 1850. A jury of five persons, though without any instructions and differing in their views as to the proper performance of their duties, found, after the time for their report had expired, that the building was not on the high road at all. Five days after, the Magistrate issued another order requiring the petitioner to pull down the house within 15 days, as the report of the jurors had not been made within the time prescribed. 44. ——— Suit brought not in competent Court—Case transferred by consent to competent Court.—When a suit has been tried by a Court having no jurisdiction over the matter, the parties cannot, by their mutual consent, convert the proceedings into a judicial process; although, when the merits have been submitted to a Court, it may result that, having themselves constituted it their arbiter, the parties may be bound by its decision. On the other hand, in a suit tried by a competent Court, the parties having without objection joined issue and gone to trial upon the merits, cannot subsequently dispute the jurisdiction on the ground of irregularities in the initial procedure which, if objected to at the time, would have led to the dismissal of the suit. A suit, having been instituted in a Court not of competent jurisdiction, was transferred with the consent of parties to a Court which was competent; but the defence of jurisdiction was set up before the issues were fixed, and was afterwards insisted on throughout. Held that in the single fact that the defendant had personally concurred in the transfer, there had been no waiver of the right to maintain this defence, and that the suit must be dismissed on the ground that it was not competently brought. 45. ——— Effect of consent—Land situated beyond British territories.—The Raja of Dangradra, an independent Chief, sued the Government of Bombay for a village which he described in the plaint as situated in the Raja's own territory. The District Judge, Ahmedabad, rejected the suit for want of jurisdiction, as the village in dispute was beyond the British territories. On appeal, the High Court remanded the case for re-trial on the merits, on the agreement by the plaintiff that he would so amend the plaint as to bring the suit within the jurisdiction of the Ahmedabad District Court. The plaint was accordingly amended, and the District Court decided the case on the merits in favour of the plaintiff. The High Court, however, finding that the amendment did not alter the original statement in the plaint regarding the situation of the village, and finding that the plaintiff's evidence and arguments were directed solely to prove that the village was not in British, but foreign territory, annulled the decree, although both the parties expressed their willingness that the appeal should be decided on the merits, the Court acting on the rule of law that no consent of parties can give to the Court a jurisdiction which it does not possess over the subject-matter of the suit. 46. ——— Consent to jurisdiction—Waiver of objection to jurisdiction.—The plaintiff sued three defendants on a bond alleged to have been executed by them to the plaintiff. Two of the defendants did not appear, or make any defence to the suit. The second defendant only appeared and objected to the jurisdiction of the Court; but his objection was overruled, and a decree was made against all three defendants. On appeal the lower Appellate Court reversed the decree, holding that the Court of first instance had no jurisdiction. The plaintiff preferred a second appeal, and contended that the first and third defendants had consented to the jurisdiction of the Court, and that the decree was binding as against them. Held, affirming the decision of the lower Appellate Court on the question of jurisdiction, that the conduct of the defendants, even if it could be held to have amounted to consent or acquiescence, did not give the lower Court any jurisdiction. Consent or acquiescence does not give jurisdiction to a Court of limited jurisdiction, though the waiver may be sufficient in a Court of superior jurisdiction. The consent which waives an irregularity, or allows the Court to exercise a power not vested in it, cannot by itself give the authority itself as an attribute of the Court, which must directly or indirectly emanate from the Sovereign. 61. ——— Waiver of want of jurisdiction—Civil Procedure Code, s. 25, Order made under, without notice to the party not applying—Transfer of civil case.—A suit for land was filed in 1883 in the subordinate Court of Cochin. In 1884, the Government, by a notification under Act III of 1874, transferred the district where the land was situated from the jurisdiction of that Court to that of the subordinate Court of Calicut, whereupon the plaintiff applied to the District Court to transfer the case to the file of the first-mentioned Court under s. 25 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The District Judge granted the application without notice to the defendants. The defendants went to trial, and also preferred an appeal against the decree, which was passed in favour of the plaintiff, without objection to the jurisdiction of the Court. In execution of the above decree (which was affirmed on appeal), the plaintiff was obstructed. He therefore filed the present suit against the obstructors under the provisions of s. 331 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and they pleaded that the decree sought to be executed had been passed without jurisdiction. Held (1) that the want of notice to the defendants of the application made under s. 25 of the Code of Civil Procedure was immaterial; (2) that the defect, if any, of the jurisdiction of the Court passing the decree had been waived by the defendants, and that the present defendants were precluded from availing themselves of it. In 1876, he was deported from the territories of His Highness, and his son, the defendant, had ever since been in charge of the shrine. The plaintiff alleged that at the time of his deportation he had money and valuables at Nathdwar which he had entrusted to his son, the defendant, for safe custody. He now sued to recover this property from the defendant. The defendant pleaded that the High Court of Bombay had no jurisdiction to try the suit. It appeared that the defendant's permanent residence was at Nathdwar, from which he was absent only when on pilgrimage or on tour. He had in Bombay an establishment called a pedi in which a bhandari or treasurer, a munim, and mehtas and servants were regularly employed. Into this pedi offerings made to the shrine of Shri Nathji by devotees were paid, as also offerings to another shrine at Nathdwar of which the defendant claimed to be the owner, and to a very small extent offerings to the defendant personally as the owner of such shrines. The defendant had similar establishments in other places in the Bombay Presidency. The offerings collected in them were transmitted to the Bombay pedi and dealt with there. The moneys from the Bombay pedi were transmitted to Nathdwar sometimes by means of hundis drawn at Nathdwar on the Bombay pedi and honoured by that pedi, and sometimes by articles being purchased for the defendant's use by the servants of the pedi in Bombay and sent to Nathdwar. In May 1888, the defendant agreed to purchase a house in Bombay for R1,18,500. Earnest-money (R10,000) was paid out of moneys in the Bombay pedi, and the employés of the pedi after the purchase lived in the house. Interest was paid on the unpaid purchase-money. In 1889, when the defendant visited Bombay, he lived in this house, but he sold it in the same year shortly before he returned to Nathdwar. The defendant had never been in Bombay until 1889. In that year, in accordance with the practice, he obtained from the British Resident at Meywar a permit to travel with an armed following to the places mentioned in the permit, one of which was Bombay. The journey was supposed to last for six months. The defendant left Nathdwar in February 1889, and after various stoppages reached Bombay on the 2nd April, and took up his quarters at the house above mentioned. The reason assigned for his coming to Bombay was that his devotees had asked him to come. When in Bombay, his followers visited him, and he visited their houses on invitation. On these occasions he received offerings which in the aggregate amounted to about R75,000. These offerings were personal, and were not paid into the pedi. This suit was filed on the 3rd May 1889, while the defendant was in Bombay. Early in August he left Bombay and retuned to Nathdwar. The plaintiff contended that the Court had jurisdiction under cl. 12 of the Letters Patent, 1865. Held that at the date of the institution of the suit the defendant was neither dwelling, nor carrying on business, nor personally working for gain, in Bombay, and that the Court had no jurisdiction. Residence in Bombay merely for a temporary purpose is not to "dwell" there so as to give jurisdiction to the High Court under cl. 12 of the Letters Patent, 1865. Held that the mere fact that the defendant had purchased the house which he occupied during a temporary visit to Bombay afforded no inference of an intention to dwell there. A defendant who was the acharya or high priest of the Vaishnav community and the Maharaj Tikait of Shri Nathji at Nathdwara had a pedi, or place of business, in Bombay where devotees paid in any presents they intended to offer him. Held that this did not amount to "carrying on business" so as to give the High Court jurisdiction under cl. 12 of the Letters Patent, 1865. The defendant, when in Bombay, was invited by his devotees and pupils to their houses, where he was treated as an incarnation of the deity with certain forms and ceremonies, and received presents, and gave his blessing. Held that this did not amount to "personally working for gain" within the meaning of cl. 12 of the Letters Patent, 1865. Held, on appeal to the Privy Council, that the expression "carry on business" in cl. 12 of the Letters Patent, 1865, is intended to relate to business in which a man may contract debts, and ought to be liable to be sued by persons having business transactions with him. The defendant, who was an acharya of the Vaishnav community and was head of their institution at Nathdwara in Udepur, where he usually resided, was, when this suit was brought, in Bombay for a time. He had in the latter place a treasurer and other servants employed in an establishment for the collection and entry of gifts made by devotees; and there also donations, made in like establishments elsewhere, were received for transmission to Nathdwara. The defendant also, while in Bombay, accepted offerings on ceremonial visits made or received by him personally, but no bargain for the amount was made beforehand. Held by the Privy Council that in the above transactions there was no "carrying on business" within cl. 12 of the Letters Patent, 1865. The ground of jurisdiction relied on by plaintiff was that defendant was carrying on a business within the jurisdiction of the District Court, the said business being conducted by his cousin; and that, the cousin being the manager of a Hindu family, the presumption was that the business was carried on with the consent of the defendant as well as for his benefit. Held that the District Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit. Inasmuch as defendant and his cousin had, as a fact, become partially divided prior to the commencement of the business, and as there was no evidence of his consent, the presumption contended for could not arise. But even if the facts had been otherwise, and the defendant had been entitled to claim an interest in the business on the ground that it was carried on by one who was the managing member of his family at the time, defendant would not be "carrying on business" within the meaning of s. 17 of the Code of Civil Procedure. To bring a principal within the operation of s. 17, the person acting as the agent within the jurisdiction should be an agent in the strict and correct sense of the term. Semble—That a member of joint family who actually consents to a trade being carried on within the jurisdiction on his behalf, or by his conduct puts himself in the position of a joint trader, carries on business within, though he may live outside, the jurisdiction. Whether s. 17 of the Code of Civil Procedure should be construed so as to exclude from its operation non-resident foreigners, even though they carry on business in British India through agents; and, if such construction be inadmissible, whether the said section of the Indian Legislature should be held with reference to such foreigners to be ultra vires,—Quære. MURUGESA CHETTI v. ANNAMALAI CHETTI . I. 119. ——— Whole cause of action—Contract—Place of performance of contract where no stipulation in contract—Leave to sue under cl. 12 of Letters Patent.—By a contract executed in Bombay on the 19th December 1885, the defendant promised to pay the plaintiff R9,152, of which amount the sum of R4,752 was to be paid by monthly instalments of R132 extending over a period of three years, and the remainder, viz., R4,400, in a lump sum at the end of the three years. It was provided that, in case of default being made in payment of any of the instalments, the whole of the amount then due should be paid forthwith. The plaintiff, alleging that the defendant had only paid eight of the instalments, brought this suit for the balance. The defendant, who did not dwell or carry on business in Bombay, pleaded (inter alia) that the High Court of Bombay had no jurisdiction, as the whole cause of action had not arisen in Bombay, and no leave to sue had been obtained by the plaintiff under cl. 12 of the Letters Patent. The written contract, which was admittedly executed in Bombay, contained no stipulation as to where the instalments or the final balance was to be paid. Held that, in the absence of stipulation in the contract itself, the intention of the parties to it was to guide the Court in determining the place of its performance. From the facts and acts of the parties it appeared that their intention was that payments under the contract should be made at Surat. The breach of contract consequently took place at Surat and not in Bombay, and the High Court of Bombay had no jurisdiction to try the suit, the plaintiff having omitted to obtain leave to sue under cl. 12 of the Letters Patent. In the case of an action on a contract the "cause of action" within the meaning of cl. 12 of the Letters Patent means the whole cause of action, and consists of the making of the contract and of its breach in the place where it ought to be performed. To give jurisdiction to the High Court of Bombay, the plaintiff must show that the contract was to be performed, and that its breach took place there. DHUNJISHA NUSSERWANJI v. FFORDE . . . I. L. same I will pay you at the rate of eight annas in the rupee. This chitti is written 21st December 1884." The plaintiffs' munim handed the following letter to the defendant: "To Shah Dowlatrai Shriram at that auspicious place, Delhi. From the seaport (town) of Bombay, written by Ganeshdas Thakurdas, whose salutations of victory * * *, etc. Do you be pleased to read * * *. I have an account with Shah Fatechand Kanyalal Jugalkissan, wherein R are claimable by me. On account of those rupees I will receive payment from you at the rate of eight annas in the rupee. A chitti in respect thereof I have obtained in writing from you 21st December 1884." These letters were exchanged at Delhi, and the plaintiffs' munim then returned to Bombay. Held that the Court had jurisdiction. If the oral agreement between the defendant and the plaintiffs' munim were taken as the basis of the plaintiffs' claim, it was clear that part of the cause of action arose in Bombay, as payment to the plaintiffs was to be made in Bombay. The exchange of letters was a carrying out in part of the oral agreement. When that agreement was made, the defendant was under a legal obligation to pay the plaintiffs' claim upon the insolvent firm. The oral agreement varied the time, place, and mode of payment, as it was competent for the parties to vary them (Contract Act IX of 1872, ss. 73, 74). If the letters had varied the terms of the oral agreement, the latter would be modified by the later expressions of the will of the contracting parties; but they did not do so, and the oral agreement remained in force and unvaried. If, on the other hand, the letters were regarded as containing the contract, they were not of such a character as to exclude the proof, under s. 92 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872), of a separate oral agreement completely consistent with their terms, namely, that the payment they provided for should be made in Bombay. Held also that, having regard to the circumstances under which they were written, that a promise to pay in Bombay might fairly be inferred from the terms of the letters themselves. The defendant addressed the plaintiffs at Bombay from Delhi, and the plaintiffs addressed the defendant at Delhi from Bombay, and it might be concluded from this that the parties intended that the letters should have the same contractual effect as if they had been respectively written to and from the places to and from which they purported to be written. Held also that the fact that the debt due from the insolvent firm to the plaintiffs, which the defendant had agreed to satisfy, had been contracted in Bombay would not give the Court jurisdiction independently of the stipulation, oral or documentary, by the defendants to pay in Bombay. It would be necessary for the plaintiffs to prove the existence of such debt as showing the nature and extent of the defendant's promise, but the existence of the debt would not constitute a part of the plaintiffs' cause of action. 145. ———————— Leave to sue under cl. 12 of the Letters Patent, 1865—Amendment of plaint in cases in which leave to sue under cl. 12 is necessary—Part of cause of action arising outside the jurisdiction—Hundi, Suit on - Suit by drawee within the jurisdiction against the drawer outside the jurisdiction.—In suits for which leave to sue under cl. 12 of the Letters Patent, 1865, is necessary, the plaint cannot be afterwards amended. The grant of leave must be taken to relate to the suit as put forward in the plaint on which leave is endorsed by the Judge accepting it. The grant of leave under cl. 12 of the Letters Patent, 1865, is a judicial act which must be held to relate only to the cause of action contained in the plaint, as presented to the Court at the time of the grant. Such leave, which affords the very foundation of the jurisdiction, is not available to confer jurisdiction in respect of a different cause of action which was not judicially considered at the time it was granted. In respect of such a different cause of action, leave under cl. 12 cannot be granted after the institution of the suit; and therefore the Court cannot try such different cause of action, except in another suit duly instituted. In suits upon hundis drawn outside the jurisdiction upon drawees within the jurisdiction, part of the cause of action arises outside the jurisdiction, and leave to sue under cl. 12 of the Letters Patent, 1865, is therefore necessary for such suits. 157. ———— Letters Patent, High Court, cl. 12—Part of cause of action arising on jurisdiction—Death of partner—Subsequent recovery of assets by surviving partner—Suit by administrator of deceased partner against surviving partner for recovered assets—Suit for partnership account.—In 1889 one H, a widow and a partner in a firm carrying on business in partnership with two persons, viz., G and B (defendants Nos. 1 and 2), in Sind and at Behrin in the Persian Gulf, died, and the partnership was then dissolved. H had no children, but it was alleged that she had adopted one P, the brother of the second defendant. On the 13th February 1890, the guardian of one K, a minor (H's husband's nephew), applied to the High Court of Bombay for letters of administration to her estate, alleging that K was her heir and next of kin. A caveat was filed by her father and others, in which they denied that K was her heir, and alleged that P had performed her funeral ceremonies. The matter came on as a suit on the 19th February 1894, when an order was made, without prejudice to any of the questions raised by the issues, dismissing the application and ordering letters of administration to H's estate to issue to the Administrator General of Bombay. Letters of administration were accordingly granted to him on the 30th March 1894. In the meantime, however, viz., on the 12th April 1893, B (defendant No. 2) had filed three suits in the High Court of Bombay, in the name of himself and G (defendant No. 1), as surviving partners of H's firm, to recover certain debts due to that firm. Disputes subsequently arose between B and G, and by a consent order of the 22nd July 1893 it was ordered that any moneys recovered in the said three suits should be paid over to a receiver (defendant No. 3), to be held by him until further order. On the 1st August 1893, consent decrees were passed in the above three suits for a total sum of R28,335, which was forthwith handed over to the receiver. On the 22nd April 1894, the suit was filed by the Administrator General of Bombay as administrator of H appointed as above stated. He claimed to recover the whole sum paid to the receiver, alleging that the first and second defendants as her partners were largely indebted to the firm, and that the money really belonged to her estate. He prayed that the receiver might be directed to pay over the money to him, and that, if necessary, the partnership accounts should be taken. The second defendant (inter alia) pleaded that the suit was one for partnership accounts, and was barred by limitation, and also that the High Court of Bombay had no jurisdiction to try it. Held that the Court had jurisdiction to hear the suit. The cause of action alleged was that the second defendant was endeavouring, under cloak of his position as surviving partner, to get into his hands a sum of money within the jurisdiction of the Court, with a view to deprive the representatives of his deceased partner of it, and to employ it for his own purposes. That was, at all events, part of the cause of action, and leave to sue had been obtained under cl. 12 of the Letters Patent, 1865. RIVETT-CARNAC v. GOCULDAS SOBHANMULL . I. L. R., 20 Bom., 15

In consequence, the Sub-Registrar refused to register the deed. The present suit was brought to compel defendant to join in registering it. The District Munsif of Perambalur dismissed the suit upon the ground that the cause of action did not arise within his jurisdiction, but at Combaconum. The Civil Judge confirmed this decision, as he found that the defendant was a permanent resident of Combaconum. Upon special appeal,—Held, reversing the decree of the Civil Judge, that as s. 21 of the Registration Act (XVI of 1864), which governed this case, rendered it necessary that the deed should be registered in Perambalur, the defendant was under an obligation to plaintiff to get the document registered at that place; that the breach of the obligation was the cause of action, and that consequently the Court at Perambalur had jurisdiction, as it was the place of the fulfilment of the obligation. 207. ———— Power of Appellate Court to give leave—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 12—Remand, Order in nature of—Property in different districts—Decrees of District Courts—Power of Appellate Court to amend.—Neither under s. 12 of Act VIII of 1859 nor in any other way has the High Court in its appellate capacity power to give jurisdiction to a District Court to enquire into facts, as upon a remand, in a suit decided in the Court of another district, and relating to lands in the latter. Of two mortgages between the same parties, the first comprised four villages, of which three were in district A and a fourth property was in district B. The second mortgage comprised, in addition to the above, three other villages in district B. Suits brought in both districts by the assignee of the mortgagee against the mortgagor were thus framed, viz., in the suit in district A for possession upon foreclosure of both mortgages, and for a declaration of the plaintiff's right as purchaser of one of the properties; and in the suit in district B, for payment of the debt on the second mortgage. Both suits were dismissed. The High Court, hearing appeals in both suits together, affirmed the dismissal of the suit in district B, and remanded the other to the Court of first instance in district A, to have the proportionate value of the properties determined, with a view to the apportionment of the liabilities of the parties by way of contribution. As the defendant, who succeeded in both suits in the District Courts, raised no question of jurisdiction, each of them might be taken to have had the consent of parties to its hearing the whole suit before it. But no such consent could be deemed to have been given to the order of the High Court made as above stated, on contested appeals. This order was accordingly unauthorized. Although wide powers of amendment, of framing new issues, and of modifying decrees are conferred upon the High Court by provisions in the Code, of which the plain meaning is not to be narrowed by judicial construction, these powers were exceeded in the change of the suits by the order in question into a suit of a description differing totally from that of either of them, as originally decreed; and this without the consent of the parties. Right of suit.—Four persons of the Chitpavan caste brought a suit in 1876, alleging that they and the members of their caste, in common with certain other castes, possessed the exclusive right of entry and worship in the sanctuary of a temple, and that the defendants, members of the Palshe caste, not being of the privileged castes, infringed that right in 1871 and thereafter by entering the sanctuary and performing worship therein. They prayed for a declaration of their right and an injunction restraining the defendants from interfering with it. The defendants contended (inter aliâ) that the suit as constituted was not maintainable; that the question was a caste question within the meaning of s. 21 of Regulation II of 1827, and not therefore within the cognizance of the Civil Courts; and that the suit was barred by the law of limitation. Held that this case was within the cognizance of the Civil Courts. The right of exclusive worship of an idol at a particular place set up by a caste is a civil right for adjudication by the Civil Court, and not a caste question. The meaning of s. 26 of Regulation II of 1827 is that the internal economy of a caste is not to be interfered with by the Courts, not that no possible matter of litigation in which a question of caste usage, or right, or privilege may arise can be taken cognizance of. 19. ———— Bom. Reg. II of 1827, s. 21—Resolution of caste excluding Brahmans from caste feasts—Majority of caste, Right of.—The plaintiffs and defendants were members of the Kutchi Dossa Oswal caste of Hindus residing in Bombay. The plaintiffs alleged that by a resolution of the caste unanimously passed at a caste meeting held on the 19th September 1893, a committee, of which they were members, was appointed on behalf of the caste for the purpose of preventing Brahmans from attending the feasts of the caste in the caste oart in Bombay, and that, on the 16th and 18th July 1894, by resolutions unanimously passed, the members of the caste were strictly prohibited from feasting any Brahman in the caste oart, and the committee was authorized not to allow any casteman, wishing to feast Brahmans in the oart, to use the caste oart and caste vessels, and, if necessary, to take legal steps in the matter. The plaint alleged that the defendants proposed to give a feast in the caste oart, to which they had invited Brahmans, and prayed for an injunction, and for a declaration that the above resolutions were validly passed and were binding upon the defendants and on the caste. The defendants contended that the subject-matter of the suit was a caste question and not cognizable by a Civil Court, and further that the meetings referred to in the plaint had not been duly convened, and that the resolutions were invalid and not binding on those who were not present and who did not consent to them. They alleged that Brahmans had from time immemorial as a matter of course attended the caste feasts, and they denied that the plaintiffs or any members of the caste had now a right to exclude them. The Court found as a fact that a large majority of the caste were in favour of excluding Brahmans from caste feasts. Held that the majority of the caste having arrived at a bonâ fide decision that the convenience and comfort of the caste were best advanced by the exclusion of the Brahmans from their oart, it was not a case in which the Court could say that the decision was so subversive of the interest of the minority as to amount to a practical confiscation of their property or denial of their rights, and that the Court ought to give effect to it. The Court accordingly passed a decree in terms of the prayer of the plaint prohibiting the defendants from bringing Brahmans into the oart to dine so long as the resolution of the caste prohibiting the practice continued in force. The Court does not decline to give effect to the expressed wishes of the majority of a caste as to the management and custody of caste property, which the minority seek to set at naught, by reason of the suit involving a caste question. In matters relating to the management of caste property and the administration of its affairs, the majority of the caste has authority to control the minority. But the Court will not by its decree enable the majority to make a tyrannical use of its power. It would not assist the majority to deprive without cause the minority of their right to use what is the common property of all, or give effect to a resolution passed in violation of the rules of natural justice or of a directly confiscatory nature. generation in receipt of the honorarium and offerings, and had been performing the rites and ceremonies according to the custom of the satra until they had been obstructed and interfered with by the defendants in such performance, and had been expelled from the kirtanghar. The prayer of the plaint was that the plaintiff's right to enter the kirtanghar to perform the said rites and ceremonies and to receive their share of the offerings might be established; that the kirtanghar from which they had been dispossessed might be made over to them for the purpose of such performance, and that a prohibitory injunction might be granted enjoining the defendants not to obstruct them in such performance. The defendants, who were the satria and the other members of the entire body of the fraternity forming the majority of the plaintiffs bhakats, denied the rights claimed by the plaintiffs as bhakats, and stated that the satra was governed by the satria and a select body of bhakats, that the plaintiff No. 1 had received mantra or spiritual initiation from one Saruram, contrary to the rules of the fraternity, and had been convicted, moreover, of a criminal offence, and a fine of R100 had accordingly been imposed on him and his partizans by the governing body of the satra, whose orders they had disobeyed by refusing to pay the fine, and they had therefore been excluded from entering the kirtanghar; and the defendants contended that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction in the matter, and that the suit was therefore not maintainable. The lower Courts held that the Civil Court could entertain the suit, and they made decrees practically ordering the admission of the plaintiffs to the kirtanghar on their complying with the order imposing the fine. Held that the rules laid down in the English cases as to expulsion from clubs or voluntary associations which people are free to join or not, and where any one who joins may well be taken to be bound not only by its general rules, but also by any special orders made by its members with regard to him in accordance with those rules, are not applicable with regard to caste unions or religious fraternities in India, to which people belong not of choice, but of necessity, being born in their respective castes, or sects, and the consequences of exclusion from which are far more serious and affect a person's status in a far greater degree than those of expulsion from a club. In such religious castes or fraternities the protection of Courts of justice, even though presided over by Judges of a different religious persuasion, against expulsion, is much more needed than in clubs or voluntary associations. Cases of expulsion from them were therefore cognizable by the Civil Courts. Sudharam Patar v. Sudharam, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 91 : 11 W. R., 457; Hopkinson v. Marquis of Exeter, *L. The decision of the lower Courts, therefore, ordering the re-admission of the plaintiffs to the kirtanghar, on their complying with the order imposing the fine, was not such an interference with the decision of the domestic tribunal of the parties as is opposed to the cases cited as to clubs, etc., as it would have been contrary to natural justice for the fraternity to enforce such exclusion after the reason for it had ceased, and make the disqualification of the plaintiffs permanent. Held, on the statements in the plaint, that the plaintiffs had a cause of action, and the suit could not have been properly dismissed on the finding of fact by the lower Appellate Court that the plaintiffs' exclusion from the kirtanghar was justified by their refusal to pay the fine imposed on them. Reg. II of 1827, cl. 21, s. 1—Cause of action—Right of suit—Onus probandi.*—In the year 1887, some members of the Pathare Kshatria caste considered that the outlay in connection with the munj, marriage and other ceremonies, by the members of the caste, were unnecessarily and unreasonably large, and that this was the cause of ill-feeling in the caste. A meeting, purporting to be a meeting of the whole caste, was held at Malad in Salsette on the 5th June 1887. Several rules framed with the view of lessening these expenses were then passed. The fourth rule was as follows: "The practice of bringing a naikin to sing in the mundup on the day of munj or marriage ceremony is to be put a stop to." The preamble to the rules contained the following clause: "Every family in the caste is to act according to these rules, and if any one be transgression of these rules on the part of any one be proved, he shall be considered as an offender of the caste." Copies of these rules and their preamble, together forming "the resolution," were printed and sent to the various divisions of the caste with a letter. The letter expressed the hope that the various sections would take steps to prevent the rules being transgressed. The plaintiff and the defendants belonged to the Girgaum section of the caste. This section approved of the resolution and acted on it. In May 1888, the plaintiff's grandnephew's munj was celebrated at the plaintiff's house, and the plaintiff, in breach of the above rules, employed a naikin to sing at it. On the 9th March 1889, D (defendant No. 6), who was secretary of the Girgaum section of the caste, wrote to the plaintiff, drawing his attention to his breach of the rules, and calling upon him to show cause, before the Girgaum section of the caste, why he should not be liable to censure, and why the man-pan invitation to him by the caste should not be quently transgressed He declined to pay any attention to communications on the subject A meeting of the Girgaum section of the caste was then held, at which twenty two members were present, and a resolution was passed, declaring that the plaintiff had transgressed the caste rules, and depriving him of the man pan invitation by the caste until a contrary resolution should be arrived at by the Chargaum and Desh It was also ordered that this resolution should be communicated to the Chargaum (local divisions of the caste) and Desh (head-quarters of the caste), which subsequently accepted and approved of the resolution, which thus became known to the whole caste. The defendants were among the twenty-two members of the Girgaum section of the caste who passed the resolution. The plaintiff sued them claiming R5,000 damages, alleging that they had passed the said resolution and circulated it among the caste, and complaining that they had "attempted to carry out the said resolution by preventing the usual man-pan invitation being sent to the plaintiff, and the depriving of the plaintiff of this invitation is equivalent to excommunicating him from his community"

Courts, it would be out of their power, in a suit relating solely to the title of the Rajah to a zamindari in British territory, to go into the question of the Rajah's title to the raj. The Rajah being a foreign power, the Courts would accept the title to the raj of the person recognized as Rajah by the British Government. But where a zamindari lying within British territory, and not shown to be an appanage of the raj, formed the subject of a suit,—Held that, since the right to the raj had, by a long course of litigation, been made by the parties themselves to depend, as it were, upon the right to his zamindari, the Civil Courts had jurisdiction to deal with the title to the latter; and that the law applicable to the suit would be the Hindu law modified by the kulachar or local custom regulating succession and inheritance in the Tipperah family. The recognition of the Rajah by the British Government is less a matter of right than one of discretion, his position being that of a petty Rajah of a hill district, rather than that of a sovereign power. Held in concurrence with the first Court, upon a consideration of the whole evidence and the conduct of the late Rajah, as well as that of the plaintiff and the Ranis of the late Rajah, that though the legitimacy of the plaintiff had been satisfactorily established, and it was shown that his mother had been married to the late Rajah in the shantigrihita form, yet it was clear that defendant had been created Jubaraj by the late Rajah, and the plaintiff's claim must accordingly be dismissed with costs. on immoveable property is not a suit for immoveable property within the meaning of cl. A claim for maintenance is not a charge upon immoveable property. A member of the royal family of Hill Tipperah brought a suit against the Rajah to have it declared that with respect to certain land situate within British India and forming portion of the possessions of the Rajah, he was entitled to the post of Jubaraj and to succeed to such land on the death of the Rajah, and also claimed maintenance and sought to have it declared that such maintenance should be a charge on the revenues of the land situate in British India. Held that the British Courts had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit, it not being one for immoveable property. The agreement provided that, if any of the sharers prevented the nomination of a sharer to officiate in his turn, he should pay R100 as damages to the person thus excluded from office. The plaintiff alleged that in 1883 it was his turn to officiate, that the defendants, instead of electing him in accordance with the agreement, nominated another person, who was confirmed in the appointment by the Collector. The plaintiff therefore sued the defendants to recover R100 as damages for breach of the agreement of 1869. Held that the agreement could not be enforced by a civil suit, as it was opposed to the policy of s. 40 of Bombay Act III of 1874, which contemplates a free election of an officiator by the whole body of registered representative vatandars to whom the Collector issue his notice—an election unfettered by any promises made beforehand by any of the sharers. Held also that a suit in respect of any injury caused by exclusion from office or service is barred by the second paragraph of cl. 110 ———————— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 11—Suit for right to property and for office or emolument.—The plaintiffs were some of the bhakats or members of a satra or religious fraternity and they claimed the right to enter the kirtanghar or prayer hall and perform their prayers and other rites therein They alleged in the plaint that the management of the affairs of the satra, "including the distribution of honorarium and offerings and the appointment and dismissal of the satria," or head of the fraternity, was vested in the samuha or entire body of bhakats, and that they and their forefathers had been from generation to generation in receipt of the honorarium and offerings and had been performing the rites and ceremonies according to the custom of the satra until they had been obstructed and interfered with by the defendants in such performance and had been expelled from the kirtanghar The prayer of the plaint was that the plaintiffs' right to enter the kirtanghar to perform the said rites and ceremonies and to receive their share of the offerings might be established, that the kirtanghar from which they had been dispossessed might be made over to them for the purpose of such performance and that a prohibitory injunction might be granted enjoining the defendants not to obstruct them in such performance The defendants who were the satria and the ...

The Civil Court therefore was not precluded either by Regulation VI of 1831, s. 3, or by the decision of the Revenue Court from granting the declaration prayed for. The object which he desired to obtain by a declaration in that form was to influence the Collector in determining whether he should be recognized as the representative vatandar in respect of the four annas share which the Gavda family possessed in a patelki vatan. Held that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit, since the declaration sought, if made, would in effect be a declaration of plaintiff's status as representative vatandar. This, however, equally with the duty of ascertaining the custom of the vatan as to service, was a duty which by s. 25 of the Bombay Hereditary Offices Act (Bombay Act III of 1874) was imposed on the Collector, and not upon the Civil Court. 152. ——— Public thoroughfare—Right to sue—Special damage—Leave—Right of lessee—Trespass.—The plaintiff, a holder of a ten years' lease of the share and rights of one of the co-sharers of a village, sued for the demolition of certain buildings and constructions on a plot of land within the area of the village on the ground that the public had been very much inconvenienced in going to and coming from the road and in taking carts, carriages, cattle, etc., and that he by reason of his own inconvenience, and also as lessee in possession of the entire rights of his lessor, had legally and justly a right to bring the action. The findings of fact were that by the terms of the lease plaintiff was entitled to maintain the action as representing the zamindari rights of his lessor; that the obstructions complained of existed when the lease was granted; that the roadway mentioned in the plaint was one used by the public in general as a foot-path and also for vehicles, and that the buildings complained of had encroached on the road. The suit was dismissed by the first Court, but decreed on appeal by the lower Appellate Court. Held that, in the absence of proof of damage over and above that which in common with the rest of the public the plaintiff has sustained, his action must fail. Public nuisance is actionable only at the suit of a party who has sustained special damage, and the case law of British India in this respect is the same as the rule of English law on the subject. Further, that the lease to plaintiff failed to show either that the land upon which the defendant had built was included in the lease, or that it intended to confer upon the plaintiff any right to question the legality of the erections at the time of the lease. Satku v. *Ibrahim Aga, I. 153. ——— Obstruction by building—Suit by zamindar for removal of buildings—Special damage—Right to sue.—The plaintiff, who was the zamindar of the village, brought an action claiming to have a chabutra or building erected by the defendant in one of the village roads removed. The road in question was a katcha road used by the village over which the public had a right of way, and it had been dedicated as a road for the use and convenience of the general public. The plaintiff got a decree for the removal of the chabutra, and the defendant appealed. Held that the rule of English law that a member of the public cannot maintain an action for obstruction to a public road without showing special injury to himself beyond that suffered by any member of the public, does not apply to a zamindar who or whose predecessor in title had dedicated to the public the road over his zamindari land. A zamindar in giving the public right of road or way over his land does not give the public or anyone else a right to interfere with the soil of the road as by erecting a building upon it. In such a case the zamindar has in common with the public the right to use the road as a road; over and above it, he has a right to the soil in the road, which he had never given to the public. In an action of this kind, the zamindar does not sue as a guardian of the public, but in respect of an interference with his own rights of property. Baroda Prosad Mustafee v. *Gorachand Mustafee, 3 B. In 1861 Government confirmed the Commissioner's decision on appeal by the plaintiffs. Ultimately, however, in 1882, Government passed a resolution reversing its former decision, and subsequently passed a further resolution allowing the plaintiff's claim to the village and ordering the same to be restored to them. In 1885 the village was restored to the plaintiffs, and the arrears of revenue since 1859 were paid back to them. The plaintiffs then claimed interest on the arrears, and, being refused the same, sued to recover it. The District Judge was of opinion that s. 4, cl. (f), of Act X of 1876 barred the cognizance of the suit by the Civil Court, but referred that question under s. 13 of the Act to the High Court. Held that the Civil Court had jurisdiction to try the suit. The resolutions of Government amounted to a distinct adjudication by competent officers that the land was exempt from payment of revenue, and was sufficient to give the Civil Courts jurisdiction over the plaintiffs' claim. Per BIRDWOOD, J.—That the claim of the plaintiffs being to obtain all the advantage flowing from the favourable decision of Government in 1882, cl. The second defendant claimed the land as owner, alleging that the mortgagor and mortgagee had failed to pay the assessment on the land to the Native Chief to whom it was due. The latter had accordingly sold it by public auction to realize the assessment, and he (defendant No. 2) had bought it. The Court of first instance rejected the plaintiff's claim on the ground that the suit could not be entertained by a Civil Court under the provisions of the Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876) and the Land Revenue Code (Bombay Act V of 1879). On appeal the District Court reversed the decree and remanded the case for trial on the merits. Held, confirming the order of the District Court, that Government having rendered no assistance in the proceedings for the realization of the revenue by the Native Chief on which the defendant relied, the jurisdiction of the Civil Court was not taken away by s. 4 (c) of the Revenue Jurisdiction Act. S. 44 of Act XVIII of 1873 implicitly authorizes tenants of all classes to construct wells for the improvement of the land held by them, and therefore where a well constructed by a tenant benefits the land held by him, a suit by the landholder in the Civil Court for its demolition as having been made without his consent is not maintainable. No mutation of names in favour of the creditor was effected in the revenue registers. The creditor brought a suit against the debtor to recover the principal and interest agreed to be paid under the bond, alleging that he had never received any rents under the jamog. Held that, whether or not the plaintiff could maintain a suit on the jamog against the tenants for the rent assigned to him in the Revenue Court, he could do so in the Civil Court, and the fact that the jamog was not in writing did not affect the question. Gunga Prasad v. *Chandrawati, I. that they elected to take land to the full value of their debentures. The Commissioners also intimated to the Company that the latter had selected lots amounting to a part only of their debentures, and required them to select others, giving notice at the same time that they did not consider themselves liable to pay interest. The Company after this proposed to defer exchanging the debentures till their due date, and if the Commissioners consented, not to call for the interest in the meantime, but agreeing to pay a quit-rent equivalent to the interest. The Commissioners agreed to this and asked the Company to declare the lots which they would receive in commutation. A selection was made, but not in accordance with the contract: the lots selected being of more value than the debentures. The Commissioners then proposed that the Company should return the debentures, and pay quit-rent upon the additional lots. This was not accepted, but the matter was left in an imperfect state. The Port Canning Land Company subsequently brought an action against the Port Canning Municipality for two years' interest on the debentures. Held that the non-acceptance of the proposal as to the additional lots could not affect the previous agreement to exchange debentures then held for equivalent lots; and that such previous agreement had been made involving quit-rent which extinguished the interest. Under the provisions of s. 39 of the Act, G contested his liability to be ejected on the ground that he was not a tenant-at-will, but one holding by virtue of an agreement executed in his favour by the landholder. The question of G's liability to be ejected was decided adversely to him, and he was ejected under s. 40 of the Act. He subsequently sued the landholder in the Civil Court for possession of the land, by virtue of the agreement, alleging that his ejectment was a breach of such agreement. The landholder's defence to this suit was that G had been rightfully ejected. Held that, inasmuch as the relation of landlord and tenant between the parties at the time of the proceedings under the Rent Act was admitted, and the dispute in the suit could appropriately form the subject of an application under cl. The arbitrator assigned certain sir land belonging to the defendants in this suit to the plaintiffs. The partition was concluded according to the terms of the award. The defendants refused to surrender such land to the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs distrained the produce of such land, alleging that it was held by certain persons as their tenants and arrears of rent were due. The defendants thereupon sued the plaintiffs and such persons in the Revenue Court, claiming such produce as their own. The Revenue Court held that such distress was illegal, as such land was in the possession and cultivation of the defendants as occupancy tenants under s. 125 of Act XIX of 1873. The plaintiffs subsequently sued the defendants in the Civil Court for possession of such land, basing such suit on the partition proceedings. Held that the decision of the Revenue Court did not debar the Civil Courts from determining the rights of the parties under the partition, and such suit was cognizable in the Civil Courts. The claim was resisted by the khera-patis on the ground that for many years they had been in possession of the land as muafi-holders. Held that the dispute so raised was a matter which could form the subject of an application to resume a rent-free grant within the meaning of s. 30 of the N.-W. P. Rent Act (XII of 1881), and that the cognizance of the suit by the Civil Court was therefore barred by cl. (c) of s. 95 of that Act, and that for similar reasons the Civil Court under cl. inasmuch as that section refers to grants for holding land exempt from the payment of rent alluded to in s. 10 of Regulation XIX of 1793, and that Regulation, assuming it to refer to grants free from payment of rent as well as of revenue, contemplated grants not only free from payment of rent in cash or kind, but free from payment of anything in lieu thereof. A tenure such as in the present case, where the land was land originally paying rent in cash, and where the cash rent was exchanged for rendition of services, is not a rent-free grant within the meaning of the Regulation, nor consequently of s. 30 of the Rent Act. Mutty Lall Sen Gywal v. Deshkar Roy, B. L. R., Sup. Vol.,774 : 9 W. R., 1, and Puran Mal v. Padma, I. L. R., 2 All., 732, referred to. Per MAHMOOD, J.—The services connected with the grant in this case did not constitute "rent" within the meaning either of the N.-W. P. Rent Act or of the N.-W. P. Land Revenue Act (XIX of 1873), and the word "render" in s. 3 of the former Act does not include or imply the rendering of services or labour. The word "rent" is probably used as the equivalent of the Hindustani words lagan or poth representing the compensation receivable by the landlord for letting the land to a cultivator, and s. 3 of the Rent Act, where it uses the expressions "paid, delivered, or rendered," must be taken to refer respectively to rent paid in cash, to rent delivered in kind, and to rent rendered by appraisement or valuation of the produce. The grant in the present case was a rent-free grant of the nature of chakran or chakri, i.e., service tenure, to which s. 41 of the Regulation VIII of 1793 related. The incidents of the tenure would be governed by s. 30 of the Rent Act and ss. 79-84 of the Land Revenue Act, being matters outside the jurisdiction of the Civil Court. The scope of s. 10 of Regulation XIX of 1793 is not limited to permanent rent-free grants, and the present suit was in respect of a matter falling within s. 95, cl. (c), of the Rent Act, and "provided for in ss. 79 to 89, both inclusive," of the Land Revenue Act, within the meaning of s. 241, cl. (h), of the latter Act. Puran Mal v. *Padma, I. L. The defendants objected to the suit being heard by the Civil Court, no proceedings having first been instituted before the revenue authorities. Held that the question whether the Collector would have brought the lands to partition, depended upon whether they were held "in common tenancy;" if they were not so held, the Collector would be only competent to make an assignment of the revenue in proportion to the several portions of the land held by the shareholders, and the Civil Court was entitled to adjudicate on the plaintiff's claim to be in possession of lands as comprising his share in the estate, and, on his succeeding in proving his claim, to declare that those lands belonged to his divided share. On the 2nd January 1894, an appeal was preferred to the Commissioner under s. 2 of Act VII of 1868 for setting aside the sale after the expiry of sixty days prescribed for appeal. The Commissioner ordered an inquiry into the question whether the appellants before him were prevented from taking steps in consequence of fraud The purchaser complained against this order before the Board of Revenue, who, acting under their power of revision, set aside the certificate, and the Commissioner subsequently set aside the sale without hearing the purchaser. In a suit brought in the Civil Court for the same object during the pendency of the appeal before the Commissioner and decided by the lower Court after the orders of the Board and the Commissioner setting aside the certificate and sale were passed,—Held by the High Court on appeal, (1) the plaintiff was entitled to proceed simultaneously in the Civil Court and in the Revenue Court. If the sale be validly set aside by the Revenue Courts, a decree must follow in the suit. (2) As regarded the contention that the Commissioner had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal, as it was barred by limitation, the question of limitation could not be held to be one of jurisdiction, and the grounds of the Commissioner's finding on that point could not be discussed in the High Court. Mahomed Hossain v. *Purunder Mahto, I. The accused, who was a Greek under British protection at Zanzibar, was convicted by the British Consular Court at Zanzibar of culpable homicide not amounting to murder, and sentenced to ten years' rigorous imprisonment under s. 304 of the Indian Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860). He appealed to the High Court of Bombay, contending (inter aliâ) that he was a Greek subject, and as such not liable to be tried by the Consular Court. Held that it was competent to Her Majesty to exercise jurisdiction in one foreign State over the subjects of another foreign State; that under s. 6, cl. (b), of Her Majesty's Order in Council, dated the 29th November 1884, the provisions referring to British subjects were applicable to foreigners enjoying British protection in so far as by treaty, capitulation, grant, usage, sufferance, or other lawful means, Her Majesty had jurisdiction at Zanzibar in relation to such persons; and that the prisoner, being a British protected person within the meaning of s. 4, cl. One of them was also convicted of slave-dealing. Held that the English Consular Court had no jurisdiction, inasmuch as the accused, even if subjects of a Signatory Power, were not resident, and their offences were not committed, within a British Protectorate. Held also that the alleged fact that the "locus in quo" was in British military occupation gave no jurisdiction to the Consular Court. 18. ———— Criminal jurisdiction along the railway through Indian Independent States—Locality of crime—Illegal arrest on lands occupied by the Hyderabad State Railway.—The authority for the exercise of criminal jurisdiction by the Government of India upon lands within the limits of the Hyderabad State Railway is derived from a grant to that Government in 1887 by His Highness the Nizam as ruler of the territory. The railway lands remain part of his dominions. The grant of civil and criminal jurisdiction contained in the correspondence of that year between the Nizam's Minister and the Resident at Hyderabad is expressed to be "along the line of railway, as is the case on other lines running through independent States." This jurisdiction, notwithstanding any words in the notification of the Government of India of the 22nd March 1888 (which could not of itself give any authority or add to that granted by the Nizam), does not justify the arrest on the lands of the Hyderadad State Railway of a subject of the Nizam under the warrant of the Magistrate of a district in British India, on a charge of a criminal offence committed in British India, and unconnected with the Hyderabad railway administration. The mere presence of the accused on the railway lands, over which criminal jurisdiction had been granted as above, was no legal ground for his arrest under the warrant of the Court in British India, his offence, if committed at all, not having been committed on those lands, and not having been connected with the railway. British-born subjects, yet this power ceased in A.D. 1709, when its Charters were surrendered to Queen Anne. From that date down to the passing of the 3 & 4 Will. IV, c. 122. With the exception of offences made punishable by the 53 Geo. III, c. 155, s. 105, by Justices of the Peace, the Recorder's Court had, by virtue of the 37 Geo. III, c. 142, s. 10, exclusive criminal jurisdiction over British-born subjects throughout the Bombay Presidency, and the same exclusive jurisdiction was continued to the late Supreme Court, and is now exercised by the High Court, with the like exception, and some further exceptions introduced by subsequent Acts of the Government of India. The Bombay District Police Act (VII of 1867), passed by the Governor of Bombay in Council for making laws and regulations, is ultra vires in so far as it confers criminal jurisdiction upon Magistrates in the mofussil, being also Justices of the Peace, over British-born subjects, as it thereby affects the Acts of Parliament under which the High Court is constituted, and interferes with the criminal jurisdiction which that Court possesses over British-born subjects in the mofussil, which jurisdiction is exclusive except in so far as it is limited by Stat. 53 Geo. 24. ———— Criminal Procedure Code, 1882, s. 4, cl. (i), and ss. 453 and 454 —Privilege—Waiver—Jurisdiction of High Court over European British subjects in Sind—Bom. Act XII of 1866.—Where a European British subject waives his right to be dealt with as such by the Magistrate before whom he is tried, he thereby loses all the benefits of the special procedure provided for him under Ch. XXXIII of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1882), including the right to have the proceedings in his case reviewed by a Presidency High Court, if another Court exercises the highest revisional jurisdiction under the Code in cases other than those against European British subjects in the place where he is tried. The definition of "High Court" in s. 4, cl. (i), of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1882) must be read with reference to the "special proceedings" against European British subjects contemplated in Ch. XXXIII, and not with reference to proceedings generally against Europeans, including proceedings in which they waive their rights under that chapter. If therefore in any particular case the special rules contained in Ch. XXXIII of the Code cease to have any application, the definition of "High Court" in the former part of s. 4, cl. (i), ceases also to have any application to such a case. The definition in the latter part of the section then prevails, and the case falls within the category of "other cases" to which that part of the section applies. The accused, a European British subject, was tried before the City Magistrate of Karachi and convicted of criminal breach of trust under s. 409 of the Indian Penal Code, and sentenced to six months' simple imprisonment. At the trial, he waived his right to be tried as a European British subject. Held that the accused was not subject to the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court. The accused not having been tried under the special procedure laid down for the trial of European British subjects, the Sudder Court in Sind, which, under Bombay Act XII of 1866, was the highest Court of Appeal in all civil and criminal matters in Sind, had the revisional powers of a High Court in the present case by virtue of the latter part of s. 4, cl. 37. ——— Native Indian subject of Her Majesty—Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), s. 188—Offence committed by an alien outside British India—Jurisdiction of Courts in British India to try such an offence.—The accused was Talati of Kalol in British territory. His family belonged to the village of Bakrol in the Baroda State. His father entered the service of the British Government and lived almost entirely at Kalol, but he does not appear to have given up his intention of returning to his family residence at Bakrol. The accused was born at Dubhai in the Baroda territory. He was educated partly at Kalol and partly at Baroda. He entered the Revenue Survey Department in the Panch Mahals. His services were lent by the British Government to the State of Cambay. He was charged with taking bribes while serving at Cambay. He was tried and convicted by the first class Magistrate of Ahmedabad within whose jurisdiction he was found and arrested. The Sessions Judge reversed the conviction on the ground that the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to try the accused. Held that the accused was not a "Native Indian subject of Her Majesty" within the meaning of s. 188 of the Code of Criminal Procedure; and though as a "servant of the Queen" he was subject to punishment under s. 4 of the Penal Code, the Magistrate of Ahmedabad, in whose jurisdiction he was "found," had no jurisdiction under that section to try him for an offence committed in a foreign State. Per PARSONS, J.—The expression "Native Indian subject of Her Majesty" in s. 188 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1882) must be construed strictly, and cannot be held to include "servants of Her Majesty." 59. ———— Receiving and retaining stolen goods within jurisdiction where the theft was committed out of jurisdiction—Penal Code, ss. 410 and 411—Commission to take evidence, Power of High Court to grant, on application of prisoner.—The prisoner was tried at Bombay, under s. 411 of the Penal Code, on a charge of having dishonestly received and retained stolen property, knowing or having reason to believe the same to be stolen property. He was also charged, under ss. 108 (explanation 3) and 109, with having abetted that offence. It appeared at the trial that the prisoner was a clerk in the employment of a mercantile firm at Port Louis, in the Island of Mauritius. On the 29th October and the 1st November 1879, certain letters addressed by the firm to their commission agent at Bombay were abstracted from the post office at Port Louis. The letters contained six bills of exchange belonging to the firm for an aggregate amount of R26,550. On the 1st November 1879, the prisoner sent all six bills of exchange in a letter to the manager of a Bank at Bombay, requesting that the several amounts might be collected on the prisoner's own account, and remitted to him by bills on Mauritius. The sums were accordingly realized by the Bank, and duly remitted to the prisoner. It was not denied that the prisoner obtained possession of the money and used it as his own. His defence was that the bills had been given to him in payment of a debt. The prisoner was convicted on all the charges; but the jurisdiction of the Court having been challenged on his behalf, the question was reserved. Held per SARGENT and MELVILL, JJ. (WEST, J., dissentiente), that the bills of exchange, having been stolen at Mauritius, in which island the Penal Code is not in force, could not be regarded as "stolen property" within the provisions of s. 410, so as to render the person receiving them at Bombay liable under s. 411; that the High Court of Bombay had therefore no jurisdiction, and that the conviction must be quashed. relates to immediate possession; and under s. 15, the party to whom such immediate possession is given by the Mamlatdar, or whose possession he shall maintain, shall continue in possession until ejected by a decree of a Civil Court. The power reserved to the Revenue Courts by s. 1, cl. 2, of Act XVI of 1838, to determine the facts of possession and dispossession, was so reserved merely for the temporary purpose of enabling those Courts to dispose of the immediate possession, which was to continue until the Civil Court ejected the party put into such immediate possession. The purpose of Act XVI of 1838, as that of Bombay Act V of 1864, was temporary only, and chiefly to provide for the cultivation of the land and to prevent breaches of the peace until the Civil Courts should determine the rights of disputants. Act VIII of 1865—Power of Head Assistant Collector—Act XI of 1865.*—At the date of the enactment of Act XI of 1865, suits for rent of land could not be entertained by the Revenue officers of this presidency, so as to bar the cognizance of suits by the Small Cause Court. Madras Act VIII of 1865, equally with the prior enactments, abstains from authorizing the cognizance by the Revenue authorities of suits for arrears of rent. 8. ———— Suit to enforce acceptance of pottah—Madras Rent Recovery Act (Mad. Act VIII of 1865), ss. 9 and 10—Boná fide denial by defendant of plaintiff's title—Question of title.—The plaintiff obtained a permanent lease of inam lands attached to a mosque from the four owners thereof. The defendant was a cultivating tenant on the lands, and the plaintiff duly offered the defendant a pottah. The defendant refused to execute a corresponding muchilika on the ground that the plaintiff was not his landlord, since the first of the aforesaid owners had granted a lease for 35 years to a person who had sublet the land to the defendant. The plaintiff thereupon brought a suit to enforce acceptance of a pottah under s. 9 of Madras Act VIII of 1865. The Deputy Collector having decided the case in the plaintiff's favour, the defendant appealed, and the District Judge dismissed the suit on the ground that the defendant's contention raised a boná fide question of title which ousted the jurisdiction of the Deputy Collector. Held that there is no provision in Madras Act VIII of 1865 that a boná fide denial of the relationship of landlord and tenant ousts the jurisdiction of the Revenue Courts; and, with regard to s. 10 of the Act, whenever a Court is invested with jurisdiction to determine the existence of a particular legal relation, the intention must be taken to be to authorize it to adjudicate on every matter of fact or of law incidental to such adjudication. Narayana Chariar v. Ranga Ayyangar, I. Land Revenue Act (XIX of 1873), ss. 72, 77—N.-W. P. Rent Act (XII of 1881), s. 95 (l).—The jurisdiction to determine or fix rent payable by a tenant is given exclusively to the Revenue Court, either by order of the Settlement officer or by application under s. 95 (l) of the N.-W. P. Rent Act (XII of 1881); and such rent cannot be determined in a suit by a landholder for arrears of rent in the Revenue Court in which the appeal lies to the District Judge or High Court. In March 1884, the rent payable by an occupancy-tenant was fixed by the Settlement officer under s. 72 of Act XIX of 1873 (N.-W. P. Land Revenue Act). In 1885, the landholder brought a suit to recover from the tenant arrears of rent at the rate so fixed for a period antecedent to the Settlement officer's order, as well as for the period subsequent thereto. The lower Appellate Court dismissed the claim for rent, prior to the 1st July 1884, and decreed such as was due subsequently to that date, but without interest. Held that the rent could not be fixed in the present suit, neither the Court of first instance nor the High Court having jurisdiction to fix it, and that the claim for rent for the period in question must therefore be dismissed. Ram Prasad v. *Dina Kuar, I. An objection was taken in the Court of first instance that the suit, as regards the second claim, was not cognizable in a Court of revenue. The lower Appellate Court allowed the objection, and dismissed the suit as regards such claim on the ground that the Court of first instance had no jurisdiction to try it. Held that the objection being in effect "an objection that the suit was instituted in the wrong Court," within the meaning of ss. 206 and 207 of Act XII of 1881, the defect of jurisdiction was cured by those sections, and the procedure prescribed in s. 207 should have been followed. contended that A's interest terminated at his death, and that S was therefore not entitled to possession. Held that S was entitled to possession. The fact that A had paid rent to the khots showed that he was their tenant. In the absence of all evidence on the subject, the presumption was that tenancy was an ordinary tenancy from year to year continuable until legally terminated. There was nothing to show that the khots had ever terminated it. A's heir could not surrender it to the prejudice of the mortgagee. S therefore had purchased a tenancy which had never been legally put an end to, and was entitled to possession. 1. ———— Proprietary rights—Ownership of wood on village lands—Forest rights.—The plaintiff sought to raise the question whether in virtue of his being izafadar and khot of three-fourths of a village, he was or was not proprietor of three-fourths thereof and entitled, as such proprietor, to three-fourths of the wood, including teak as well as izaili wood, growing on the village lands. His rights under the izafati title depended on two documents: one, an imperial sanad, dated in A.D. 1653; the other, a Marathi document, dated in A.D. 1722. The first was construed to confer upon the grantee, as collector of the revenue, certain perquisites, and to make hereditary a right which before had been only a personal right, with reversion to the sovereign, but not to confer any proprietary right in the village lands. By the second, all that was granted was a right to babatas or cesses, the grantee being the desai, or collector of the revenue, on behalf of the Government. Therefore it was held that the izafati title did not carry with it the proprietary right. On the question as to the khoti, it was held, without the expression of any opinion, that no khot is or can be the proprietor of the soil; that such a right is not vested in every khot. This khot of three-fourths of a village had been authorized by the Government to carry on the management as khot of the remaining fourth, and had agreed, at the time of entering into this arrangement, that he would preserve for the Government all the trees in reserves marked by survey numbers, and all the teak trees in the village. He had admitted that the Government had the power to make such reserves. It was not shown that the Government had cut down any izaili wood in the village; only that it had recovered the value of some izaili wood cut in the reserves without their leave. It was decided that the khot had not made out a title to any teak wood as against the Government, nor a claim against it in respect of the izaili wood. Nagardas v. Conservator of Forests, Bombay

2. ———— Right to restoration of tenure after resumption by Government—Conditional restoration.—In a suit brought by a khot in 1862 to recover an hereditary share in a khoti village, which had been mortgaged by her husband in 1845, and taken directly under Government management by the Sub-Collector of Kolaba on failure by the mortgagee to pass the customary agreement (kâbuliat) for the security of the revenue for the year 1851-52, the Court of first instance decreed the restoration of the khoti estate on payment by the plaintiff of any loss which may have been sustained by Government during its entire management, but the District Judge in appeal modified that decree by annexing a condition that the plaintiff was to observe the engagements which had been entered into between Government and the sub-tenants of the estate through the revenue survey which had been introduced during the direct management of the village by Government whether as regards the rates of assessment or the right of tenancy. Held by Arnould and Newton, JJ. Act V of 1879), s. 162—Right to levy profits from khoti co-sharer—Limitation.*—The position of a khot, in the villages to which the Bombay Khoti Act I of 1880 has been extended, is that of a superior holder, and in the event of attachment of his village his rights in respect of khoti profits, on his resuming the management of the village, would be regulated by s. 162 of the Revenue Code (Bombay Act V of 1879). But this rule does not hold good where the village attached is one in the Kolaba district to which the Khoti Settlement Act (I of 1880) has not been extended, unless the khots therein are sanadi or vatandar khots. Where plaintiff sued the defendant, his khoti co-sharer, to recover from him the khoti profits for the year during which the village was under Government attachment, and it was found that the Khoti Act I of 1880 was not extended to the village and that the plaintiff was not a sanadi or vatandar khot,—Held that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover the profits from the defendant, nor could he do so from Government under the Revenue Code, even if it had collected them for the year of attachment. KHOTI TENURE—continued.

tenure on certain conditions and stipulations set forth in twelve clauses, the chief of which were the following: Clause 1st provided that the khot should annually pay to Government a fixed sum of R249 2 as. 35 rs. Clause 7th provided that the khot should allow the lands, which had been granted on maphi istava tenure to certain hawaldars before the date of the sanad, to continue in their possession; that he should every year recover from them the Government dues and pay the same over to Government in addition to the amount stipulated with him on account of the khotship. Clause 9th provided that the holders of the suti lands in the village were the owners of those lands. Should a new survey be made and a new assessment settled, the same should be settled by Government for the holders of the suti lands agreeably thereto. From 1845 to 1871 the management of the khoti village was entrusted to the defendant as a maktadar, or lessee, under two kabuliats passed by him—one in 1845 to M I M, the grantee of the khoti village, and the other in 1858 to the grantee's heirs and legal representatives. By clause 5th of the kabuliat of 1858 the defendant agreed to carry on the management of the village and render a detailed account of the balance of the village revenue every year. Clause 7th of the same kabuliat was in the following terms: "I (the lessee) will bring under cultivation and into prosperous state the waste, culturable, and unculturable land of the aforesaid village. I will take the proceeds of the same during the years of my contract. After the expiry of the years of the contract, you are to take the assessment of the fields according to the practice of the village. I have nothing to do with the same. I will not let (the village) nor lease to anybody for a longer period than for the period of the contract. If I let it, I will make good the damage you may suffer." In 1859 some of the maphi istava lands were sold by the Collector for arrears of assessment and bought in by Government. The defendant applied to the Collector to have the lands transferred to him, and the Collector transferred them to his name. Shortly afterwards the defendant acquired some more lands which were held on suti tenure in the village. He either purchased them or took them up on the tenants abandoning them. In 1861 when the survey was introduced into the village, he got his title to these lands recognized by the Superintendent of Survey. In 1871 the defendant's management of the village ceased. But he refused to deliver up to the plaintiff either the maphi istava or the suti lands which he had acquired during his management. The plaintiff therefore sued as khot of the village to recover the said lands with mesne profits, alleging that the defendant had illegally and fraudulently acquired those lands on his own account while acting as plaintiff's agent and praying that he should be declared to have acquired and held them in trust for the plaintiff. The defendant contended (inter aliâ) that the lands in suit were not included in the khoti grant; that they belonged to Government; that he had acquired some from the Collector and the rest from the Superintendent of Survey; that under his kabuliats he was entitled to take up the lands direct from Government, and that the plaintiff was only entitled to the assessment due on the lands which he had refused to accept. Lastly, the defendant denied that he had acted in fraud of the plaintiff's right in acquiring the lands in dispute on his own account. Held, on the construction of the sanad, that the plaintiff being the khot of the whole of the village exclusive of the land granted in inam, the maphi istava lands were included in the khoti grant; that the khot's interest in them, whatever might be the extent of it, was not separable from the khoti estate; and that the khot had a reversionary interest in the maphi istava lands as well as in the suti lands, which had been abandoned by their former occupants. Held also that the defendant was not precluded by the terms of his lease from acquiring the lands in dispute on his own account. The engagement to furnish accounts of the balance of the village revenue at the end of each year was simply an engagement to furnish the plaintiff with information which would be of use to him, and which indeed it would be necessary for him to possess when he resumed the management of the village on the determination of the lease. It imported nothing more than that; and the whole transaction evidenced by the kabuliats was merely an assignment, in consideration of a fixed annual payment to be made by defendant to plaintiff, of the rights and liabilities of the latter to be exercised and discharged for a certain period by the former. For that period the defendant was the makhtadar, or tenant of the plaintiff's khotship; and though a certain confidence was necessarily reposed in him in connection with a tenancy of this nature, and though he was bound jealously and scrupulously to protect the plaintiff's interests, so far as they were in his keeping, yet he was not bound by the strict rule which prohibits a trustee from acquiring for himself an estate of his cestui que trust. Under cl. 7 of the kabuliat of 1858, the defendant was at liberty either to take up waste lands himself or put in tenants; if he put in tenants on leases, the special advantages of any leases were to expire with his own lease. But the actual occupation of land either by himself or by his tenants was not to be interfered with at the determination of his lease, so long as he or they continued to pay the assessment according to the practice of the village. The defendant could therefore, without the intervention of the Collector, have taken up the maphi istava lands in suit and become himself the tenant; and he could have also acquired the suti lands from former sutidars, or taken them up if waste, without the intervention of the Survey Superintendent. The circumstance that, when acquiring the lands, he needlessly invoked the assistance of the Revenue authorities, would not invalidate his title if it could not be impugned on other grounds. Held further that the defendant was not guilty of fraud, as there was no evidence to show that he had acted in a surreptitious or secret manner in acquiring the lands in suit. On the contrary, his action in applying to the revenue authorities was a sign of his good faith rather than of any fraudulent intent. The plaintiff was therefore not entitled to oust the defendant from the lands in suit. FAKI ISMAIL v. MAHOMED ISMAIL which his proprietary right extended to raise crops of any kind or to preserve and cut the jungle and forest trees on the lands therein He complained that since 1855 56 the Collector of the district prohibited him from exercising the above alleged rights and prayed that the obstruction might be removed and R600 awarded as damages The plaintiff based his claim mainly on the settlement of 1788 Dunlop's proclamation of 1824 and several other khoti grants in the district. The defendant denied that the plaintiff had any proprietary right in the village and contended (inter alia) that the khot derived his rights from the yearly kabuliats passed by him; that his right to cultivate did not extend to cultivating the jungle land, and that his position was no better than that of a patel The Joint Judge who tried the suit held that under the settlement of 1788 the plaintiff as khot was entitled to the jungle produce except timber, that in virtue of Dunlop's proclamation of 1824 the plaintiff acquired an unqualified right to the forest land in the village and timber growing on it and that the defendant had no right to appropriate assessed or unassessed land for forest purposes and awarded the plaintiff the sum of R600 as damages On appeal by the defendant to the High Court,—Held that the application of the general rules of construction of grants to a subject by the State requires that language of such general import as is ordinarily to be found in the khot's sanads should be taken most beneficially to the State Held accordingly that in the absence of a sanad expressly granting it the ownership neither of the soil nor of cultivated or uncultivated lands passes by the grant of the vatandari khotship Held also that the grant of the vatani khoti did not make the khot a perpetual tenant of Government in respect of all lands in the village except dharа lands Held on the authority of Tajubai v Sub-Collector of Kolaba, 3 Bom A C 132 and Ramchandra Narsinha v Collector of Ratnagiri 7 Bom, A C, 41 that a permanent relationship was created between the Government and the khot which could not be interfered with as long as the settlement of 1788 was in force except with the khot's consent and therefore that in 1855 when the paham of 1788 was in force the Government could not withdraw the thikan in question from the plaintiff's cultivation Held also that, in the absence of evidence to show that the right to the jungle produce was intended to be reserved to Government the plaintiff was entitled to cut down brushwood whether as a source of revenue or for the purpose of bringing the land into cultivation Held that the respondent was entitled to damages for the years during which he had been excluded and to an injunction restraining the defendant from excluding him in the future Held also that as khot the respondent had no right to cut timber in forest and uncultivated lands whether by virtue of his khotship or Dunlop's proclamation COLLECTOR OF RATNAGIRI v ANTAJI LAKSHMAN . ———————— Dock, Construction of.—The plaintiff demised to the defendants for a term of 999 years certain lands a portion of which, A, was liable to an annual rent of R500 per acre. For the other portion, B, which was described in the lease as "being at times covered by the sea," a nominal rent of R1 per acre per annum was reserved. The lease contained a power to the lessees "to reclaim from the sea" the whole or any portion of B, and provided that upon such reclamation the lessees should pay for any portion of B which they might "reclaim from the sea" an enhanced rent at the rate of R500 per acre per annum. The lessees also had power under their lease to dig or excavate any portion of the demised lands, and to remove the soil therefrom. The lessees thereupon excavated a portion of B, and thus turned it into a dock, at the entrance of which they constructed gates, by means of which they could in a measure, but not entirely, control the flow of sea water into the dock. The defendants charged nothing for the use of the dock, but for the use of the wharves round it they charged a fee. Held that the expression "to reclaim from the sea" signifying, in its primary and ordinary sense, the conversion of the reclaimed land into dry land, by rendering it secure from the ingress of the sea, with the view to its being used as such, the construction of the dock was not such reclamation as was contemplated in the lease, and therefore the enhanced rent of R500 per acre could not be charged for the water area of the dock. 1. ——— Reference by Collector to District Court—Land claimed by Collector on behalf of Government or Municipality.—The scope and object of the Land Acquisition Act (X of 1870) is to provide a speedy method for deciding the amount of the compensation payable by the Collector, when such amount is disputed, and the person or persons to whom it is payable. S. 15 of the Land Acquisition Act contemplates a reference when the question of the title to the land arises between the claimants who appear in response to the notice issued under s. 9, and who set up conflicting claims one against another as to the land required, which the District Judge as between such persons can determine. The Collector has no power to make a reference to the District Judge under s. 15 in cases in which he claims the land in question on behalf of Government or the Municipality, and denies the title of other claimants, and the District Judge has no jurisdiction to entertain or determine such reference. The second and third claimants were the lessees of Kashinath The said land was taken up by the Collector of Poona on behalf of the municipality of that city for the purposes of erecting a central market. The claimant having declined to receive R12,880 offered to him as compensation, the Collector referred the matter to the District Judge, who, after deducting 21,532 square feet from the measurement of the whole land for roads, divided the rest, on the principle of frontage and back sites, in the proportion of one to three, appraising it at the average rate of eighteen sales enumerated in certain sale deeds at ten annas subject to R3,000 awarded to the second and third claimants for their unexpired leases On appeal by the Collector to the High Court,—Held that neither the principle of frontage applied by the District Judge nor the proportion of one to three for frontage and back sites was applicable to the claimant's land, which was surrounded on all sides by buildings, which shut it out from communication with the town, except by opening a passage of ten feet wide. As there was no evidence to show that there was any particular demand for land for building speculation one and a half annas per square foot was to be regarded as the adequate value of such a large area as 179,436 square feet, subject to the lessees' compensation for their interest. The claimant was not entitled to the award of R700 on account of severance. The decree was accordingly varied by awarding R19 739-2 as compensation for the property, to which 15 per cent. was to be added, as provided by s. 42 of the Land Acquisition Act (X of 1870) Held also that the claim of the claimants Nos. 2 and 3 was not triable in this suit. The construction to be put on ss. 78-81 of the Land Registration Act is that the right to the rent of an estate is in the true proprietor, although unregistered, and his right to sue for the rent is not taken away by anything in these sections of the Act which do not affect his cause of action, but merely put an impediment in the way of his realizing the rent, until he has complied with the law by obtaining registration of his name as proprietor. enter into possession. Afterwards, in 1861, N alone entered into an agreement with the plaintiffs to give them a lease of that property for five years, the plaintiffs being willing to accept that lease with such title as N could confer. Held that it was unnecessary, under such circumstances, to consider whether the estate of N and his wife in the property was chattel real or real estate; for if it were chattel real, N by his marital right, according to English law (which in this case applied), might dispose, either wholly or in part, of her interest; and if the property were realty, the lease by N would at all events bind her for the term of five years, if N should so long live. Assuming the property to be realty, semble—that on N's death before the expiration of the term of five years, the lease would, as against the wife surviving, be voidable only, and not void. The proposition laid down by the Judge of the Division Court, that all immoveable property in Bombay was of the nature of chattel real, and that there was not any property of the nature of freehold of inheritance in that island, disapproved of and denied as being irreconcileable with Royal Charters, Acts of Parliament, and of the Legislative Council of India, decisions of the Courts, both in India and England, and the tenures of land and practice of conveyancers in Bombay. As to three of the tracts of the land in question, the plaintiff based his claim on certain sanads alleged to have been granted by the officers of Tippu Sultan to his ancestors; and as to the fourth, he claimed a title by prescription, alleging that the land had been in the possession of his family for forty years prior to 1870, the date of the institution of the suit. The plaint contained no indication of a claim which was put forward during the argument of the appeal, that the payment to the Government of assessment in respect of kumri, pepper, and farmaish, or in particular of kumri assessment, and the entry of such charge in the chitta of a vargdar muli or geni, gives to such vargdar, or at least is a recognition by Government that such vargdar has a right of ownership in the forests in respect of which it was contended such assessment was imposed. The plaintiff admitted a right on the part of Government to take certain kinds of timber from the forests; but, subject to this, he contended that the timber, as the soil and produce of the forests generally, belonged to him, subject also to the right of Government to levy an increased assessment thereon. Subject to these rights on the part of Government, the plaintiff claimed an absolute right to have kumri cultivation carried on within the limits specified; that he and no other had a right to cultivate and give in cultivation as rice land jungle land within those limits, and an exclusive right to cut down and dispose of timber within those limits. Held by GREEN, J., on the evidence, that the sanads put forward were not proved to have been in fact executed by any person having authority to execute such documents, and that, even if genuine, they had never been recognized by the British Government as valid and binding or been made the foundation of the revenue relations between the British Government and the plaintiff's family or those under whom they claimed. exercise, on behalf of the Government, of its proprietary right over the timber and even the firewood in the forests in dispute from the time that the assertion of the right became a matter of appreciable consequence, and that the plaintiff's family knew this, and submitted to it, and themselves applied repeatedly for timber to the Revenue officers. From the year 1842 downwards there was no instance which effectively disproved the acquiescence of the plaintiff's family in the ownership of Government. That ownership had not been parted with at all in the opinion of the parties most interested. If it had been parted with and become vested in the plaintiff's ancestors as an integral portion of the estate in the land which the plaintiff claimed was theirs, then the assumption and the exercise of ownership by the Government over the trees from 1841 down to the filing of the suit was itself a perpetual ouster of the family from a portion of their estate, and would constitute a complete eviction of the owner as such. If there was such an ouster proved as to the whole by a multiplicity of acts bearing on the several parts of the estate, but all referrible to the same principle or purpose, then the plaintiff had a cause of action in the nature of ejectment so soon as he was disturbed in his possession by any of these acts, in their legal nature such as to contradict and annihilate his right throughout the estate, even though their immediate physical incidence was on but particular parts of it—a cause of action extending, as to its physical object, to the whole property, because his power over the whole was invaded and overthrown. Regarding the plaintiff's right, therefore, to land, to timber, to kumri cultivation, and to reclamation and disposal at his own mere will, as parts, so far as the right was concerned, of a single legal unit, the cause of action had arisen more than twelve years before the institution of the suit. The plaintiff's right, so far as it rested on the sanads, was not supported, but contradicted by the active enjoyment assumed on behalf of the Government thirty years almost before the institution of the suit, of an important part of the advantages conferred by the grants, and on an assertion of rights which, if the grants were to be construed as the plaintiff desired, called for immediate action in the Court on his part. The claim was also contradicted by a series of transactions in which the Government officers disposed, from time to time, of portions of land included within the confines of the estate which the plaintiff claimed. His claim, therefore, on the sanads was untenable. Setting aside the sanads, then, the mere payment of kumri tax, however it may have indicated that some land was beneficially occupied by the vargdar, afforded by itelf no certain evidence either of the place of that occupation or of its nature as temporary or permanent, as held on proprietary right, or as merely casual and precarious. It is the possibility of referring the exaction levied to some particular area, shown to have been actually and exclusively held by the taxpayer, either by extrinsic evidence, or by that of the Government accounts themselves, that makes the payment and receipt of a tax a practical assertion and admission of private ownership of the space thus rendered distinguishable. But private ownership being established, it still remains true that a property in the soil must not be understood to convey the same rights in India as in England. It may be subject to restrictions and qualifications varying according to the peculiar laws of each country; and those acts which under one system would be necessarily regarded as contradictions of any ownership over the object on which they were exercised except that from which they spring may, under another system, be quite compatible with an ownership subsisiting unimpaired side by side with the limited right to which they would be attributed. The reserve of timber generally, as of particular kinds of timber, may be referred to as an instance of this divided dominion. What the Government intend and practically intimated through its officers, constituted the bounds which it set to the plaintiff's acquisition through its acquiescence, both as to the extent of the rights to be exercised and the local limits within which they were to be exercised. As to the former point, whether the plaintiff's predecessors gained a general ownership of the soil or not, they either did not gain an ownership of the timber or were wholly ousted from the exercise of that ownership from 1842 downwards. As to the latter point, the evidence showed that the plaintiff's family as vargdars exercised rights over forest tracts in all the estates to which the present claim extended, though as to some of these tracts these rights could not be referred to any particular space. But, even though there had been no interference on the part of the Revenue officers with the plaintiff's free use of the forest, that free use without an exclusive appropriation would not in itself constitute an exclusive right against the State. The right arising from the State's eminent domain is not extinguished by its mere non-exercise, and its exercise was not called for until some public injury or inconvenience arose. The exercise of the plaintiff's dominion had been prevented, except within such limits as the executive officers prescribed, at any rate from 1842; while the ownership of the Government over the forest trees and its proprietary right in the soil had been during the same time at least uniformly asserted, and the plaintiff's suit was therefore barred by limitation. The deed of assignment contained (inter alia) a provision empowering the assignee, in the event of any breach by L of the covenants contained in the said deed, to let the premises for any term or terms of years for such rent and under such covenants and conditions as D might think fit; and there was a further provision that L should not remove any of the stock-in-trade, chattels, etc., without the permission of D. Shortly before the expiration of the lease, the plaintiff served a notice on L to deliver up possession of the premises on the expiry of the lease or to pay an enhanced rent therefor, and a notice on D requiring D to deliver up possession and stating that in default he would hold D jointly liable with L for the enhanced rent. D had durwans and a clerk on the premises to see that nothing was removed therefrom without his permission. L and D continued to keep the stock-in-trade on the premises after the determination of the lease, and the business was carried on as before. The plaintiff subsequently brought an action against D and L for compensation for use and occupation of the premises for four months. Held (reversing the decision of AMEER ALI, J.) that the lease did not pass under the terms of the assignment to D, and that D was not liable to the plaintiff for compensation for the use and occupation of the premises. The defendant contended that in the agreement there was an implied covenant for quiet enjoyment and that, as he had been compelled by the plague authorities to vacate the premises from 5th February 1898 to 1st April 1898 there had been a breach of the covenant He claimed therefore to deduct the rent for that period or to be allowed it as a counterclaim as damages for disturbance Held (giving judgment for plaintiff) that, even assuming that in the agreement for the lease a covenant for quiet enjoyment was to be implied, such a covenant could only be one for quiet enjoyment by the defendant so long as it was lawful for him to enjoy the property No guarantee against the acts of Legislature could be read into the implied covenant for quiet enjoyment MERWANJI MANCHERJI CAMA v ALI KHAN . . In this suit brought by the reversionary heir, on her death, with the object of having the grant set aside as invalid as against him, the patni lease was not proved to have been made with authority or from necessity justifying the alienation by the widow. Held that the patni was, on the death of the widow, only voidable, and not of itself void; so that the plaintiff, the next inheritor of the zamindari, might then elect to treat it as valid. The plaintiff had done so. He had accepted rent in respect of the tenure, as that tenure was specified in a petition which accompanied the patnidar's deposit of the rent in a Court under the Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 61. This was primâ facie an admission that the patni was still subsisting. At the time of the ascertainment of mesne profits, the landlords claimed to set off the rent against each year's profits, but they were referred to a separate suit, and set-off was not allowed. The present suit for refund of profits or rent for the period aforesaid was brought in August 1892, and one of the objections raised was that the claim to the rents of 1295 and 1296 was barred by limitation. The plaint alleged that the cause of action accrued upon the date of ascertainment of profits and the rejection of the claim to set-off in 1892, and it was urged that at all events it did not accrue before delivery of possession in 1891. Held that the objection was valid and the claim to the rents in question was barred by limitation. Swarnamayi v. *Shashi Mukhi Barmani, 2 B. The tenant having failed to pay rent, one of the owners brought a suit for her share in her own name only, and obtained a decree. In execution of this decree, she seized and sold property belonging to the tenant. The sale took place on the 12th of February 1869. On the 15th of February the other owner brought an interpleader suit, the tenant having likewise failed to pay rent to her. It appeared that the defendants' ancestor had held the village from the Collector (then in charge of the temple properties) under a lease which expired in 1831, when he offered to hold it for two years more. The Collector made an order that, if the tenant would not hold the land at the existing rate permanently, he should be required to give security for two years' rent. Two "permanent" muchalkas were subsequently, taken from the tenant successively, but they were returned as not being in proper form. No further document was executed, but the tenant and his descendants remained in undisturbed possession at the same rate of payment up to 1888. In that year the plaintiff sent a notice of ejectment to the then tenant, who, however, set the plaintiff at defiance and remained in possession till the present suit was brought in 1890. Held that it should be inferred that the defendants were in possession under a permanent right of occupancy. The lower Courts held that the defendants were permanent tenants, but were bound to pay a reasonable rent. Their decision was not based on evidence given in the case, but on what was termed a "well-known distinction between the sheri or private lands of an inamdar and the khata or raiyatwar lands held by recognized tenants." The exercise of certain rights of transfer or inheritance, etc., were regarded as evidence of fixity of tenure at a reasonable rent. On second appeal by the plaintiff the High Court held that they were not bound by the findings of the Judge, as it did not appear that it was admitted that the distinction drawn between sheri and khata tenants was correct, or that every khata tenant, as such, exercised the right described by the Subordinate Judge. In determining the rights of khata tenants who held under no express contract, the best evidence no doubt, if possible, would be the evidence of custom in the particular village in question, but evidence of similar notice. Held, further, that the letter of the 18th March 1873 was a sufficient notice. There is nothing which makes it a necessary inference that a tenancy in Calcutta is a tenancy by the year, in the absence of any special agreement to the contrary. The zamindar was the owner of the kudivaram as well as of the melvaram right, and it was admitted that the tenants' possession was derived from him. Held that these facts alone were not enough to raise the presumption of a tenancy from year to year. Per SHEPHARD, J.—It is not the general rule that the tenants in an ordinary zamindari hold their lands as yearly tenants or as tenants from year to year. Many of the occupants of zamindari lands are not tenants in the proper sense of the word, and the fair presumption is that when new occupants are admitted to the enjoyment of waste or abandoned lands, the intention is that they should enjoy on the same terms as those under which the prior occupants of zamindari lands held, it being open to the zamindar to rebut that presumption, either by proving that the usual condition of thing does not prevail in his estate or that a particular contract was made between him and his tenant. Per SUBRAHMANIA AYYAR, J.—The presumption of tenancies from year to year which is well known to English law, because of the general prevalence in England of tenancies in the strict legal sense of the term, would also arise in this country if the tenancies here were proved to be similar. But inasmuch as practically the whole of the agricultural land on zamindaris is cultivated by raiyats who are generally entitled to hold them so long as they desire to do so, subject to the performance of obligations incident to the tenure, there is insufficient foundation from which such a presumption may be raised. Nor is the fact that the zamindar is the owner of the kudivaram right as well as the melvaram right sufficient to shift on to the raiyat the burden of proving that the tenancy is not one from year to year. In order to discharge the onus which is on him in a case of ejectment, the zamindar must do more than merely show that the land when it passed into the hands of the raiyat was at his disposal as relinquished or as immemorial waste land. He must show that the defendants' possession is inconsistent with the primâ facie view that it is held under the usual and ordinary form of holding prevalent in the zamindaris. Achayya v. *Hanumantrayudu, I. Forfeiture is not bound to be deemed the invariable penalty for breach of contract occasioned by the construction of a well. When such forfeiture is claimed, and the right to claim it is proved, the Court should consider whether an adequate remedy cannot be secured to the landlord without depriving the tenant of his whole interest in the holding; and if it finds that such a remedy can be given, and that the tenant has not deliberately invaded his landlord's rights, but, admitting his own position as tenant, has acted in what he believed to be the exercise of a right, or in the honest belief that his act would not meet with objection on the part of the landlord, it should refuse to oust the tenant, and leave the landlord to seek a remedy which would be more proportionate to the injury he has sustained, and amply relieve him from its effects. A zamindar can sell the tenure in the hands of the transferee, not being one of the judgment-debtors, if he does so with reasonable promptness: provided he has not done anything to recognize the transfer. Where a zamindar makes a transferee a party to a suit for rent and accepts a decree against him jointly with other persons, he must be held to have recognized the transferee as a tenant, although the latter's name may not have been entered as such in the zamindar's book. If we do not, we will be deprived of our right of obtaining a settlement of such excess land, as well as of the land which will accrete in future to the said chur, and no objection thereto on our part shall be entertained." In a suit by the lessor, alleging that in 1876 he had caused a measurement to be made, and had called on the lessees to execute a kabuliat for the rent of certain excess lands, and praying that the lessees might be ejected, the lessees pleaded that the lessor had waived his right to enforce the forfeiture by subsequent receipt of rent. It appeared that payments had been made to the lessor by the lessees, which were accepted as rent, but were kept in suspense, subject to payment by the lessees of the "remaining amount." Held that such a qualification did not make the payments anything else than payments of rent, and that the lessor had waived his right to insist on re-entry on the lessees' failure to measure the lands, or execute a kabuliat when called on to do so. Davenport v. *Queen, L. The plaintiff sued to eject the defendant, his tenant, for failure to pay rent, on the ground that such failure operated as a forfeiture under the terms of the lease. The defendant pleaded (1) that he had paid rent to plaintiff's co-sharer, and (2) that the plaintiff alone could not sue without joining his co-sharer. The Subordinate Judge disallowed both these pleas, and passed a decree declaring the plaintiff entitled to eject the defendant, unless the latter paid up all arrears of rent up to date of decree, together with interest and costs of suit, within three months. This decree was reversed by the District Judge on appeal, who awarded possession of the land to the plaintiff, on the ground that the defendant, having in his written statement denied the plaintiff's exclusive title, was not entitled to be relieved against the forfeiture clause in the lease. Held, reversing the decree of the lower Appellate Court, that the plaintiff's alleged cause of action being, not a disclaimer or denial of his title, but merely non-payment of rent, forfeiture for breach of such a covenant in the lease could be relieved against by a Court of Equity. The lower Courts found that the jote belonged to the plaintiffs, and the defendants had been and still were in possession of the same as tenants; but dismissed the suit on the ground that the service of notice had not been proved. Held (on second appeal) that, inasmuch as the cause of action must be based on something that accrued antecedent to the suit, the denial by the defendants of their landlord's title in the written statement would not entitle the plaintiffs to a decree on the ground of forfeiture. In a suit brought after a notice to quit, which was found to be invalid, to eject the defendant, and for a declaration that he had no such permanent howladari tenure as he alleged, the defendant again set up the howladari lease under which he admitted he had paid a fixed rent to the plaintiff. Held that, though the defendant repudiated the particular holding which the plaintiff attributed to him, he did not question the plaintiff's right to receive the rent, and therefore did not in any sense repudiate his landlord's title. What he did amounted merely to questioning the right of the landlord to enhance the rent, which was not such a disclaimer as would result in law in a forfeiture of his tenure. then tenant in possession of the land, attorned to the mortgagee (plaintiff) by a kabuliat, dated the 1st June 1848 S died in 1870 in possession as tenant. In 1877 the plaintiff sued the defendant B as heir of S for three years' rent from 1871 72 to 1873-74 The defendant answered that he had had no possession or occupation of the land since the death of his father in 1870 It was decided in that suit that the defendant had occupied the land up to 1874 and a decree was made against him for the rent claimed In July 1878 the plaintiff brought the present suit for rent for the subsequent three years, viz, from 1875 76 to 1877-78 The defendant answered that he had given up the land in 1871 72 He did not assert, either in the former or in the present suit, that he had given notice to the plaintiff of his intention to terminate his tenancy by surrendering the land to the defendant, nor did he allege that the plaintiff had assented to a surrender of it by the defendant without such notice The lower Courts found the kabuliat proved, but threw out the plaintiff's claim on the ground that he failed to prove the defendant's occupation of the land during the three years for which rent was claimed In the second appeal it was contended for the plaintiff that the tenancy continued until the mortgage was paid off Held that S became a yearly tenant of the plaintiff under the kabuliat, but that he was not bound to continue his tenancy until the mortgage was paid off. Held also that neither the plaintiff nor S as yearly tenant could, without the consent of the other terminate the tenancy without six months' notice ending with the cultivating year (30th June) Held further, that the defendant, as the son and heir of S, was responsible on his father's contract of yearly tenancy, so far as he (defendant) had assets of his father, and in order to free those assets from a continuing liability under that contract he was bound to give a six months' notice of surrender to the plaintiff. notice stated that these six fields were no longer in their possession, and that they would not be responsible for the assessment. The plaintiff notwithstanding brought this suit to recover assessment for the year 1893-94. The Subordinate Judge held that the defendants continued to be tenants of the fields in question and were liable to the assessment on the ground that the notice of relinquishment did not purport to give vacant posesssion to the plaintiff. He thereupon passed a decree for the plaintiff. On appeal the District Judge reversed the decree, holding that the notice was a conditional relinquishment which terminated the tenancy. On appeal to the High Court,—Held (confirming the decree of the lower appellate Court) that the defendants were not liable to the assessment. S. 74 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code (Bombay Act V of 1879) only declares the customary common law on the subject of relinquishment of tenancy. A notice of relinquishment is not invalid because it does not purport to give and does not in fact give vacant possession to the inamdar. The result is the same, whether the fact that the possession is not vacant appears on the face of the notice or is shown otherwise. A tenant giving up demised land to his landlord is bound to give him vacant possession. The result, however, of his not doing so is not to continue the tenancy, but to create a claim for damages on the part of the landlord. The tenant is liable in damages to the extent of the loss of rent which the landlord sustains during the actual period for which he is kept out of possession and the expenses he is put to in recovering possession of the land. 451. ———— Construction of a contract in a pottah allowing relinquishment of the land leased, in whole or in part.—A pottah granted a permanent mokurari lease for mining purposes, and gave to the tenant the privilege of surrendering either the whole or part of the land included in the lease, with a deduction to be made in the rent for the extent of the land that might be found on measurement to have been surrendered. Held that this privilege could only be exercised by the tenant upon a strict observance of the conditions expressly declared, or plainly implied, in the lease itself. The lease was of 1,974 bighas. The tenant executed a deed of relinquishment of 1,409 bighas 8 cottahs 9 gundas, whereof possession was surrendered with the exception of two plots, one of 24 and the other of 9 bighas. Held that, according to the true construction of the contract, there was error in the judgment of the High Court which decided that the retention of the plots did not altogether deprive the relinquishment of its effect. This retention did more than lessen the area actually surrendered. It was a mistake to suppose that an increased rent to be paid by the relinquishing tenant in proportion to the areas retained and surrendered, respectively, would adjust the point disputed as a matter of law. The contract was that, in case the tenant surrendered a part, the future rent was to be ascertained by the measurement of the area relinquished. To have made a new surrender would have been within the competency of the tenant. But for the tenant to continue to hold possession of part of the area which he had purported to relinquish was not open to him, or consistent with the validity of the surrender, the contract not admitting of approximate equivalents in regard to the possession of the total area professed to be surrendered, but not surrendered. Therefore the surrender upon which rested the defence to a suit by the lessor for the full rent was invalid in law. RAMCHURN SINGH v. RANIGANJ COAL ASSOCIATION . . . . I. L. R., 26 Calc., 29

The notice required the defendants to vacate within eight days. The defendants pleaded that they were mirasi or permanent tenants. This plea was not proved. The Court of first instance passed a decree awarding immediate possession. The Appellate Court held that, although the notice to quit was not according to s. 84 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code (Bombay Act V of 1879), still as the suit was brought long after the expiry of the proper period, the plaintiff was entitled to recover possession "at the end of the present cultivating season." Held in second appeal that, the notice to quit not being according to law, there was no legal determination of the tenancy. The plaintiff could not therefore succeed. Held also that the plea of permanent tenancy set up for the first time in the defendant's written statement in the present case was not such a disclaimer of the landlord's title as to dispense with proof of a legal notice to quit on the part of the plaintiff: Baba v. *Vishvanath Joshi, I. 493. ——— Plea of permanent tenancy—Decree, Forms of.—The plaintiff sued to eject the defendants from certain land. The defendants pleaded that they were permanent tenants under a lease granted to their ancestor by the plaintiff's grandfather in 1805. The Court of first instance awarded the plaintiff's claim. On appeal, the District Judge held that the lease on which the defendants relied was one determinable on the grantee's death, but as the grantee's heirs (the defendants) had continued in possession paying the stipulated rent, they were entitled to a reasonable notice to quit. The District Judge accordingly passed a decree, directing the defendants to vacate the land at the expiry of six months from the date of the decree. —Held that the District Judge could not, in his judgment, give the notice which the plaintiff was bound to give to his tenants. 494. ——— Plea of permanent tenancy—Denial of title—Forfeiture—Waiver—Objection taken in second appeal.—The plaintiff sued the jaghirdars of a certain village (defendants Nos. 1 to 11) and certain of their tenants (defendants Nos. 12 to 18) for specific performance of an agreement made between the plaintiff and the jaghirdars, by which the jaghirdars agreed to give up to the plaintiff possession of certain lands, which were in possession of the tenants (defendants Nos. 12 to 18). The jaghirdars pleaded that they were unable to give possession, as the tenants (defendants Nos. 12 to 18) were permanent tenants and refused to quit the land. The tenants (defendants Nos. 12 to 18) put in a separate defence, also alleging that they were permanent tenants of the jaghirdars. The lower Appellate Court held that the tenants (defendants Nos. 12 to 18) were yearly tenants and did not hold in perpetuity, and that the jaghirdars had power to eject them. That Court therefore passed a decree for the plaintiff for specific performance of the agreement as against the jaghirdars and for possession as against the other defendants. The

The tenancy continued to be regulated by his agreement until plaintiff, in 1867, demanded an increased rent, which the defendant refused to agree to pay. Upon that demand and refusal the plaintiff, at the end of the Fasli, and without tendering a pottah for another Fasli stipulating for the increased rent, brought his suit to eject. Act VIII of 1869, s. 14.*—A kabuliat, executed by the tenant of land held in hawala tenure, provided that on an adjoining chur becoming fit for cultivation the whole land, old and new, held by the tenant should be measured, and the old having been deducted from the total, rent should be paid for the excess land at a specified rate up to five drones, and for any more at the prevailing pergunnah rates. It provided also that either (a) rent should be realized according to law with interest thereon; or that (b) at the close of the year the owner should, by a notice served on the hawaladar, require him to take a settlement of the excess land, and within fifteen days to file a kabuliat, or (c) the excess land might be settled with others. Such a chur having been formed, the zamindar measured without notice to, and in the absence of, the hawaladar. He then served a notice on the latter requiring him to execute a kabuliat within fifteen days for payment of a fixed rent upon the excess land as found by the measurement, or to yield up possession. Disregard of this led to a suit in which the zamindar claimed either khas possession or rent on measurement by order of Court. Held that neither the kabuliat nor the terms of s. 14 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869 precluded a suit for assessment of the rent upon measurement; nor did the absence of authentic measurement as prescribed by the kabuliat have that effect, or affect the measurement by the Amin; but that, until both the measurement and the assessment of the rent had taken place (which might be either in the manner prescribed or by judicial termination) the zamindar could not put the hawaladar to his choice between (b) executing a kabuliat for the rent and (c) yielding up possession. 80. ——— Mulgeni tenure, History and nature of—Alienation not a necessary incident—Clause against suffering attachment and sale valid—Right of re-entry—Clauses against alienation—Policy of the law—Transfer of Property Act, IV of 1882.—The plaintiff sued to establish his right to attach and sell certain land in execution of a decree obtained by him against a third party who held the land from the defendant under a mulgeni lease. The lease contained a clause which, after forbiding the tenant from alienating it by mortgage, sale, or lease, stipulated that the tenant was not to let it be sold, or attached and sold in satisfaction of judgment-debts, and that, if he did, the landlord might take away the land and give it to others for cultivation. The defendant contended that the land could not be attached and sold by reason of this clause. The lower Courts held that the clause was invalid, both because such a restriction on alienation was repugnant to the mulgeni tenure in contemplation of law, and because, occurring in a lease which was virtually in perpetuity, it would make the land for ever inalienable, and was therefore against public policy. On appeal to the High Court,—Held that the clause was not invalid on either ground. The nature and history of the mulgeni tenure considered. The policy of the law, as evidenced by the Transfer of Property Act, IV of 1882, with regard to clauses against alienation, considered. Held also that, if the tenant allowed the land to be attached and sold by not taking measures to satisfy his judgment-debts, it would be a breach, both according to the letter and spirit of the clause in the lease, and would give the lessor a right of re-entry. Held further that, although technically there would be no breach or right of re-entry until attachment and sale had been suffered by the tenant, yet, as the attachment of itself could be of no use to the creditor, since the debtor was already prevented by his lease from alienating, and as it would be necessary, even if the attachment were allowed, to forbid the sale by a concurrent order, the attachment itself, which would under those circumstances be futile, should not be permitted. LETTERS OF ADMINISTRATION —continued.

2. ——— High Court, N.-W. P.—Administrative operation in Bengal.—A British subject died intestate, leaving property within the jurisdiction of the High Court of the N.-W. P. and of the High Court at Fort William. General letters of administration were granted by the High Court of the N.-W. P. to the Administrator General of Bengal, who was not then aware that the deceased had left property within the jurisdiction of the High Court at Fort William. On discovering that the deceased had left property within the jurisdiction of the latter Court, the Administrator General applied to that Court for general letters of administration, which were granted by the Court on condition that he would apply to have the letters of administration granted by the High Court of the N.-W. P. recalled. The High Court at Fort William has power to grant to the Administrator General letters of administration which shall operate throughout the whole of the Presidency of Bengal. IN THE GOODS OF NECHTERLEIN [1 B. L. R., O. C., 19

3. ——— Attorney of executor—Administrator General.—The High Court had no power to grant letters of administration to the attorney of the executor of a deceased in respect of assets situate in the Punjab. The High Court has power to grant letters of administration in respect of such assets to the Administrator General. IN THE GOODS OF DUNCAN . . 1 B. L. R., O. C., 3

4. ——— Succession Act (X of 1865), ss. 212, 213—Attorney within jurisdiction of Court.—Under ss. 212 and 213, Act X of 1865, it is necessary that the attorney applying for letters of administration should be within the jurisdiction of the Court. IN THE GOODS OF NESBITT. IN THE GOODS OF BRIANT . . . . 4 B. L. R., Ap., 49

5. ——— Letters of administration or probate from Supreme Court.—The obtaining of probate or letters of administration from the late Supreme Court is no ground for subjecting the party obtaining them to the jurisdiction of the High Court in matters connected with the estate in respect to which probate or letters of administration were so obtained. LESLIE v. INGLIS . 1 Hyde, 67

6. ——— Widow not resident in any zillah—Act XXVII of 1860—Act VIII of 1865.—Where a widow, not being resident in any zillah, has not been able to get a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, letters of administration were, on the consent of the widow, directed to issue to the Administrator General. IN THE MATTER OF DAMOODAR DOSS . . . Bourke, Test., 6

7. ——— Jurisdiction of Recorder's Court.—The Recorder's Court had the same powers in respect to the grant of probates to the estates of natives as the High Court before and after the passing of the Indian Succession Act,—i.e., it could not grant probates of the will of a Hindu in any case in which, according to the Hindu law of inheritance and succession, the testator had no power to make a will; and, in dealing with the will after probate has been granted, the Court could not give effect to it, so far as it is contrary to the Hindu law of inheritance. Quære—Whether the Recorder's Court has power to grant letters of administration, or such letters with a will annexed, to the estates and effects of a native of British India; but in all cases it must be guided in granting them by the law of inheritance or succession of such native, and it cannot grant administration to the estate of a Hindu, Mahomedan, or Bhuddist which would interfere with such law. 8. ——— Administration with will annexed—Act VIII of 1855, s. 17—Pecuniary legatee—Administrator General.—A pecuniary legatee is not entitled to letters of administration with will annexed in preference to a creditor, and therefore is not entitled, under ss. 10 and 17 of Act VIII of 1855, to a grant of administration in preference to the Administrator General. IN THE GOODS OF VIRGAL . . . . . 1 Bom., 103

9. ——— Ground for refusing letters of administration—Act VIII of 1855, s. 30.—The statement of a belief by the Administrator General that applicants for probate are about to make charges with s. 30, Act VIII of 1855, prohibits, and thereby renders it illegal for them to "receive or retain," is not a sufficient ground for inducing the Court to refuse letters of administration to applicants otherwise well entitled, and whose application is altogether dehors the Administrator General's Act. 10. ——— Minor Hindu widow—Guardian—Special citation—Caveat.—Upon an application by the father of an infant Hindu widow for the grant of letters of administration to him as her guardian and as guardian of the estate of her deceased husband, and of the estate of the husband's mother, it appeared that the only property of the husband consisted of a sum of money ordered to be paid to him under a certain decree, upon his constituting himself the representative of the mother. This he had not done. It also appeared that there were no unliquidated debts due by the husband. The sum of money in question was in the hands of the Official Trustee. Held that letters of administration could not be granted to the father, but that the widow could apply when she came of age, and that until that time the Official Trustee could pay the income to her next friend for her maintenance. A special citation had been served on the step-mother of the husband, and she had entered a caveat. Held that she had no right to enter a caveat simply because she had received a special citation. After his death, one of his brothers, without taking out letters of administration, sold the land to the plaintiff. The defendant claimed a right of way over this land, alleging that it was public land. He obtained an injunction from the Mamlatdar's Court, restraining the plaintiff from obstructing his alleged right of way. Thereupon the plaintiff filed a suit to set aside the Mamlatdar's order, and for a declaration that he was owner of the land, and that defendant had no right of way over it. Both the lower Courts rejected the plaintiff's claim on the ground that under s. 190 of the Succession Act (X of 1865) plaintiff could not establish his right to the land in the absence of letters of administration to the estate of D, the original owner. Held, reversing the decrees, that s. 190 of Act X of 1865 did not apply. value of R10,000, and thus allowing an appeal to the Privy Council,—Held by a Bench of the Court that, as Act VI of 1874 did not confer the right of such an appeal, it could only be allowed now if it could be shown that the right existed before the passing of that Act, and found that, as a matter of fact, such a right did not previously exist. Although, under cl. 15 of the Charter of 1865, an appeal is given to the High Court from any judgment of a single Judge, an order or certificate of a Judge allowing an appeal to the Privy Council cannot properly be considered a judgment of the High Court. Such an order has its origin in an Act of Parliament for the better administration of justice in the Privy Council, and belongs rather to Privy Council proceedings than to the legitimate province of the High Court. The plaintiff who had not appealed to the Privy Council applied to the High Court for leave to transmit the order to the Court of first instance for execution of the share decreed to him, but, on account of the assignment abovementioned, was unable to produce the certified copy of the decree of the Privy Council. The Judge presiding over the Privy Council Department in the High Court held that the production of a certified copy of the order of the Privy Council was excusable under the circumstances, but refused the application, on the ground that the decree of the Court of first instance, which was affirmed by the Privy Council, could only be executed as a whole and not partly by one of the plaintiffs. Held, on appeal, per GARTH, C.J.—That the duties of a Judge in dealing with the meaning of decrees of the Privy Council are purely ministerial, and that any order made in such ministerial capacity could not be considered a judgment, and could not therefore be made the subject of an appeal to a Bench of the High Court under cl. 15 of the Charter. Per WHITE and MITTER, JJ.—An order of a Judge presiding over the Privy Council Department in the High Court, rejecting an application for execution, is a final order, and is a judgment within the meaning of cl. 15 of the Charter, and is therefore appealable. 2. ——————— Practice — Difference of opinion on Division Bench regarding preliminary objection as to limitation—Civil Procedure Code, s. 575.—S. 27 of the Letters Patent for the High Court of the N.-W. P. has been superseded in those cases only to which s. 575 of the Civil Procedure Code properly and without straining language applies. There are many cases to which s. 575, even with the aid of s. 647, does not apply; and to these s. 27 of the Letters Patent is still applicable. One of the cases to which s. 575 of the Code does not apply is where a preliminary objection being taken to the hearing of a first appeal before the High Court on the ground that the appeal is time-barred, the Judges of the Division Bench differ in opinion as to whether the appellant has shown sufficient cause, within the meaning of s. 5 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), for not presenting the appeal within the prescribed period. The decision of such a preliminary objection is not a "hearing" of the appeal, but precedes the hearing, or determines that there is no appeal which the Court can hear or decide. Where such a preliminary objection is allowed, it cannot be said that the Court which, by reason of the Limitation Act, has no jurisdiction to hear the appeal, should nevertheless "affirm" the decree of the Court below. In the case of such a preliminary objection and such a difference of opinion (the Bench being equally divided), the opinion of the senior Judge should, under s. 27 of the Letters Patent, prevail. Appaji

10. ———— Defamatory statement made by one newspaper copied into another and commented upon as untrue—Retention of libel—Malice.—A certain newspaper called the Rajya Bhakta published a false and defamatory statement of the plaintiff. More than a month afterwards the defendants published an article in their newspaper, the Jam-e-Jamshed, calling attention to the statement made in the Rajya Bhakta and repeating it. The article, however, declared that the said statement was "evidently false." It pointed out that the defendants were the first to raise an outcry against it; that they had expected the plaintiff to take notice of it, but that, as he had not done so, they published that intimation to the public. The plaintiff sued the defendants for libel. He alleged that he had not taken any notice of the original statement in the Rajya Bhakta, as that paper was an obscure print not generally read in the Parsi community to which both he and the defendants belonged. He complained that, the defendants had maliciously repeated and called attention to libel in their paper for the purpose of giving it a wide circulation, and that their assertion of its untruth was made merely in order to protect themselves. The defendants pleaded that the article in their paper was not defamatory and denied malice. Held that, reading the article as a whole and in its natural sense, and taking it in connection with previous articles appearing in the defendants' paper with reference to the plaintiff, it was in itself defamatory of the plaintiff. 4. ——— Existence of lien—Deposit of shares with power of sale—Unjustifiable revocation of power—Effect of, on right of lien.—The defendant, being largely indebted to the plaintiff company, had, from time to time prior to the 22nd November 1865, deposited with them certain shares and share certificates in various joint-stock companies as security for the repayment (as alleged by the plaintiffs) of all moneys due or which might hereafter become due from time to time to them for principal and interest, and had executed several powers of sale and transfers and letters of pledge in favour of the plaintiffs. On the 22nd November 1865, the defendant executed a power of attorney authorizing the plaintiffs to sell or dispose of the said shares and gave them a promissory note for R1,90,000 with interest at 11 per cent. per annum. Between the 22nd November and 2nd January 1866, the plaintiffs caused their right of lien over the said shares to be registered by the various joint-stock companies concerned. On the 1st February 1866, the defendant, being found on adjustment of accounts to be indebted to the plaintiffs for R1,82,173, and being pressed for payment, gave them a second promissory note for that amount with interest at 12 per cent. per annum. On taking the second note, the plaintiffs gave up the first one and put a receipt on the back of it. In April 1870, the defendant wrote to the plaintiffs revoking the power-of-attorney given by him to the plaintiffs, publicly notified such revocation, and refused to pay the debt on the ground that it was barred by limitation. Rupees one lakh of this amount was in respect of sums lent to the company and guaranteed by the claimants. The remainder consisted of money expended in the working of the company's business. E L & Co. claimed to be in possession generally of all the property of the company, and to be entitled to a lien on such property in respect of the above claim of R1,12,000. Other creditors disputed the possession and the right to the lien claimed. Held that, even assuming E L & Co. to be in possession of the property of the company as alleged, they had not the lien that they claimed. A lien is either general or particular. The claimants had not a general lien, because they were neither "bankers, factors, wharfingers, attorneys, or policy-brokers," to whom a general lien is limited by s. 171 of the Contract Act. Nor had they any particular lien: nor under s. 217 of the Contract Act, because that section was inapplicable, having to do only with a lien on a sum of money of the principal in the hands of the agent: nor under s. 221 of the Contract Act, because the sums advanced and expended were not, as required by that section, "disbursements and services in respect of" the property on which the lien was claimed, but were loans made on behalf of the company generally and for the purposes of the whole concern. Plaintiff sued C and L to obtain a declaratory decree to the effect that the factory could be sold in satisfaction of his decree for rent under Act X of 1859, free of incumbrances created by the bonds. Held that, as no money was advanced for the lease, and no debt was due from the lessee to lessor, plaintiff had no lien on the factory in satisfaction of a debt. Held that plaintiff could have proceeded under s. 110, Act X, and then under s. 111, if L objected to the sale of the factory; but having no prior lien upon the factory, he had no cause of action as against L. any custom to that effect. If the banian claims a lien, he must prove its existence either by showing some express agreement giving him the lien or by showing some course of dealing from which it is to be implied. On the other hand, where merchandise consigned has been sold in good faith, and in accordance with the purpose for which the consignment was made, and the proceeds have been brought into account between the consignee and the banian, the latter is not liable to account to the consignor. The principal of the agent cannot disturb the account with the sub-agent except on the ground of bad faith. A banian not setting up a written agreement, nor asserting that he had advanced to the firm on the security of specific quantities, claimed a lien as against the consignor on merchandize consigned to the firm, whether arrived or in transit. The lien alleged was for the general balance of account, in virtue of an agreement extending to the whole of the merchandize consiged, whatever might have been the terms of the consignment between the consignor and consignee. The banian had made advances, but for them the consideration was the profit to be made by sales. There was no pledge nor any agreement, express or implied, giving the banian a lien on the goods consigned. It was therefore unnecessary to determine whether the banian had notice of the terms of the consignments, nor was it necessary to consider the effect of s. 78 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872), there having been no pawn. The banian having no lien against the consignee had none against the consignor, and could not question the right of the latter to stop in transitu. PEACOCK v. BAIJNATH. GRAHAM v. BAIJNATH . I. 16. ———— Question not taken in pleadings or grounds of appeal—Consideration of question on appeal.—A question of limitation, when it arises upon the facts before a Court, must be heard and determined, whether or not it is directly raised in the pleadings or in the grounds of appeal. The fact that a subordinate Court has decided that the suit or appeal before it was brought within time, or that there was sufficient cause, within the meaning of s. 5 of the Limitation Act, for the appellant in that Court not presenting the appeal within the period of limitation prescribed, does not preclude the High Court from considering that decision in appeal. This decision was reversed by the District Judge, who remanded the suit for disposal on the merits, holding that the production by the plaintiff of a copy of the judgment, dated the 25th October 1890, raised a presumption that the suit was in time, and shifted the burden of proof to the defendant to show that an earlier copy was granted to plaintiff, or that the decision was pronounced in the plaintiff's presence. Against this remand order there was no appeal. At the rehearing, the question of limitation was not again raised, and the Munsif gave a decree on the merits. An appeal was preferred to the District Court, but no mention was made of the question of limitation. On appeal to the High Court,—Held that the question of limitation had been put aside by the consent of the parties who desired to have the case decided on the merits, and that the appellant could not be allowed to fall back on this plea of limitation which he had abandoned in the lower Courts. 48. ——————— Deduction of time—Disputed title—Sufficient cause—Substitution of parties.—The plaintiffs as heirs of R, the husband of one B, more than twelve years after her death sued to recover lands alienated by her. As an answer to the plea of limitation, they alleged that, in a suit for other property brought against B in her lifetime, they presented a petition after her death praying to be allowed to appear as her representatives, and were opposed by one L claiming to be an adopted son of R; that in March 1847, and within twelve years before suit, the Principal Sudder Ameen ordered the plaintiff's names to be substituted for that of B as defendants in that suit. Held by the majority of the Court (dissentiente GLOVER, J.) that these proceedings did not bar the operation of the old Law of Limitation (s. 14, Regulation III of 1793). 50. ——————— Deduction of time—Beng. Reg. II of 1805, s. 3—Adverse possession—Suit by heir for share of inheritance.—A died in 1813. At A's death one of his heirs entitled to a share in the succession of his estate obtained possession, claiming the entirety under a deed of gift. Another heir also claimed the entirety, first under a will, and in the alternative as customary heir. Suits were brought by the two claimants, in the course of which questions were raised as to who would be entitled in case both claimants should fail, but from the frame of the suits it was impracticable to deal with these questions till the adverse claims to the entirety were disposed of. Ultimately, in 1842, those claims were disposed of by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in one of the suits by a decision which in substance negatived the claims of both parties to the entirety, and decreed that the heirs of A, according to the Shiah law of inheritance, were entitled, and directed the mesne profits to be brought into Court and divided among such heirs. A suit was in consequence instituted in 1852 by one of the heirs of A to carry into execution the decree of the Privy Council made in 1842. Held that, although the claim which accrued so long ago as the death of A would have been in ordinary circumstances barred by the Bengal Regulations III of 1793, s. 14, and II of 1805, s. 3, yet that, as the pendency of the appeal rendered it impracticable to bring the suit until the question was disposed of by the decree of the Privy Council in 1842, the suit must be considered as supplemental to that decree, and as it was brought within twelve years from that date, it was not barred by these Regulations. Held also that, although one of the original claimants had obtained possession under an order of the Court, and retained the same until the final decree in 1842, it was not such a quiet and undisturbed possession, under the circumstances, as to operate by Regulation II of 1805, s. 3, as a bar to the suit. 40 ——— Action of contract—Cause of action—Breach of contract and refusal to perform it—In actions of contract the breach of a contract is the cause of action, and the Statute of Limitations runs from the time of the breach and not from the time of the refusal to perform the contract In 1822 A purchased at a Government sale at Calcutta a quantity of salt, part of a larger portion then lying in the warehouse of the vendors (the Government) where the salt was to be delivered By the condition of sale it was declared that, on payment of the purchase money, the purchaser should be furnished with permits to enable him to take possession of the salt there was also a stipulation that the salt purchased should be cleared from the place of delivery within twelve months from the day of sale, otherwise the purchaser was to pay warehouse rent for the quantity then afterwards to be delivered. The purchaser paid the purchase money and received permits for the delivery of the salt, which was delivered to him in various quantities down to the year 1831, in which year an inundation took place which destroyed the salt in the warehouse, and there remained no salt to satisfy the contract The purchaser petitioned the vendors for a return of the purchase money, which was refused, on the ground that the loss happened through his negligence in not sooner clearing the salt from the warehouse An enquiry, however, took place at the instance of the Government who referred the matter to the Salt Collector The Collector did not make his report till the year 1838 and upon that report the Government refused to return the purchase-money claimed in respect of the deficient salt The purchaser then brought an action of assumpsit for recovery of the purchase money of such part of the salt as had not been delivered, alleging as a breach the non-delivery thereof To this the defendants pleaded the Statute of Limitations that the cause of action had not accrued within the commencement of the suit The Supreme Court at Calcutta found a verdict for the plaintiff Held on appeal, reversing that decision that when the purchaser applied for the residue of the salt and was told there was none to deliver the contract was broken, and the cause of action accrued from the time of such breach and that the subsequent enquiries by the Government did not suspend the operation of the Statute of Limitations till 1838 the time of the final refusal and that the remedy was barred by the statute Semble—There may be an agreement that, in consideration of an enquiry into the merits of a disputed claim no advantage should be taken of the statute in respect of the time employed in the enquiry, and an action might be brought for a breach of such agreement EAST INDIA COMPANY v. V of 1827, s. 1, cl. 1—Prescriptive right—Repeal of statute, Effect of.*—In 1873 the plaintiff sued for his share in certain ancestral property in the possession of the defendant, and alleged that the latter had been united with him in estate. He, however, admitted that he had lived separate from the defendant for forty years previously to the institution of the suit, and that he had not during that period received any portion of the profits of the ancestral property. The defendant pleaded limitation. Both the lower Courts held that the case was governed by Act IX of 1871, sch. II, art. 127, and decreed in favour of the plaintiff on the ground that no demand by the plaintiff of his share and refusal to comply therewith had been proved. Held by the High Court, in special appeal, that the defendant had acquired, under Regulation V of 1827, s. 1, cl. 1, a prescriptive title in the immoveable estate sued for by his uninterrupted possession as proprietor for more than thirty years before Act IX of 1871 came into force, and that therefore the plaintiff's claim was barred, the effect of that Regulation being not only to bar the plaintiff's remedy, but to take away his right. The repeal of a statute or other legislative enactment cannot, without express words, or clear implication to that effect in the repealing Act, take away a right acquired under the repealed statute or other enactment while it was in force, and accordingly, although Act IX of 1871, s. 2, sch. 1, expressly repealed Regulation V of 1827, it did not affect any prescriptive right or title which had, under s. 1 of that Regulation, been acquired before Act IX of 1871 was passed. The language of Acts IX of 1871 and XV of 1877 leads to the conclusion that by each of these enactments the starting point and period given in its schedule were to take the place of those given by the Act which preceded it in the case of all suits instituted after the date of the Act coming into force, and that the expiration of the period, calculated with reference to the Act in force at the date at which the note was executed, does not necessarily affect the remedy. Under Act XIV of 1859, the limitation for such a suit was six years computed from the date of the bond. Before that period expired, Act IX of 1871 came into force, which provided a limitation for such a suit of three years computed from the date of demand. Held that, as the cause of action and the institution of such suit occurred after the repeal of Act IX of 1871, the provisions of that Act were not applicable, and accordingly, whether Act XIV of 1859 or Act XV of 1877 governed such suit, it was barred, as in either case limitation began to run from the date of such bond. Had that Act been in force when the suit was instituted, the suit would have been within time under art. 62 of sch. II of that Act. The suit was brought, however, after the passing of Act XV of 1877, and by reason of the accounts not being signed did not come within the scope of art. 64 of sch. II of that Act. Held that the words in s. 2 of Act XV of 1877, "nothing herein contained shall be deemed to affect any title acquired under the Act IX of 1871," did not save the plaintiff's right to sue on the account stated, a right to sue not being meant by or included in the term "title acquired," that term denoting a title to property and being used in contradistinction to a right to sue; that the last clause of that section was not applicable, because Act XV of 1877 did not prescribe a shorter period of limitation than that prescribed by Act IX of 1871, but attached a new condition to the suit, viz., that the accounts must be signed by the defendant or his agent duly authorized in that behalf; and that the suit was in consequence barred by limitation. Under Act XV of 1877, sch. II, cl. 127, the limitation for such a suit is twelve years from the time the exclusion becomes known to the plaintiff. Held that the period of limitation prescribed by the latter Act is shorter than the period prescribed by the former Act within the meaning of s. 2, Act XV of 1877. II, arts. 134 and 148.*—Under the Limitation Act, IX of 1871, the period of limitation for suits to recover possession of property purchased from a mortgagee depended upon the good faith of the purchaser. A suit against a purchaser in good faith was barred after twelve years from the date of the purchase, under art. 134 of sch. II. In other cases a suit might be brought against the purchaser within sixty years from the date of the mortgage, under art. 148 of sch. II. Art. 134 of the later Limitation Act (XV of 1877), by the omission of the words "in good faith" makes twelve years from the date of the purchase the period of limitation for all such suits, without reference to the question of good faith on the part of the purchaser.

same Court before the period of limitation had expired. That where there has been a misjoinder which has precluded a Court from entertaining a suit, the period during which such suit has been prosecuted diligently and in good faith may be deducted in computing the period of limitation; the inability of the Court to entertain a suit combining causes of action which could not be combined, being covered by the words "from other cause of a like nature,"—in s. 14 of the Limitation Act. That with reference to the widow's amended suit, inasmuch as her original suit (on behalf of herself and her six children) had been filed before the period of limitation had expired and had been prosecuted diligently and in good faith, the time during which that original suit had been pending must be deducted, and her amended suit held to be not barred. That for similar reasons a like deduction should be made in favour of the six fresh suits of her children (unless a contrary decision were necessitated by the fact that their plaints had remained unstamped until after the expiration of the extended period of limitation). Per SUBRAMANIA AYYAR, J., that although an amount equal to the fees properly payable in respect of the widow's amended suit, and of the six fresh suits filed by her children had in fact been paid on the joint suit originally filed, credit could not be claimed out of that original payment for the Court-fees due on the six fresh suits subsequently instituted. These plaints must therefore be considered to have been not duly stamped, if not entirely unstamped, at the time when the period of limitation expired. That the said plaints having been filed in time, the fact that they were not duly stamped, or were entirely unstamped when the period of limitation had expired, did not render them time-barred, since the plaints must be regarded as having been presented on the day upon which they were filed. It cannot be inferred from the Limitation Act, 1877, that the word "plaint" as used in s. 4, explanation, means "plaint duly stamped." A "plaint" in law means merely "a private memorial tendered to a Court, in which the person sets forth his cause of action: the exhibition of an action in writing." Whether any Court-fee is payable in an action commenced by the plaint, and if so when and how it should be paid, are matters that are foreign to the question whether the document is a plaint or not. The Court Fees Act and the Limitation Act are entirely different in their purpose and scope, and neither can be taken to control or qualify the other. Per DAVIES, J., that, inasmuch as the order of the Subordinate Judge requiring separate plaints was erroneous, it could not operate to enhance the Court-fees truly payable. The true plaints in the case, in so far as stamp duty was concerned, were the two joint plaints originally presented. These were filed in time, and were sufficiently stamped. The fees having been paid at the beginning, no question arose as to the insufficiency of stamp duty, and the objection on the ground of limitation was thereby disposed of. Venkatramayya v. *Krishnayya, I. 29. ——— Memorandum of appeal insufficiently stamped—Conditional order admitting appeal—Deficiency made good after period of limitation—Court Fees Act, ss. 4, 5, 25, 28, 30—Memorandum of appeal from decree granting two distinct declarations—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 541. — [illegible] not [illegible] mit- [illegible] by the copy s required by the Code. A memorandum of appeal is a document included in the first and second schedules to the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870) and is a document within the meaning of ss. 4, 25, 28 and 30 of that Act, and therefore cannot be filed or recorded in or received by, the High Court unless and until the proper Court fee in respect of it is paid, and is of no validity unless and until it is properly stamped. Consequently, if it is not when tendered, properly stamped, it is not at that time a memorandum of appeal within the meaning of s. 541 of the Code, and the appeal cannot be regarded as having been at that time presented within the meaning of s. 4 of the Limitation Act, or as valid for any other purpose except in the events specified in s. 28 of the Court Fees Act. When a memorandum of appeal which, when tendered, was insufficiently stamped, has subsequently been sufficiently stamped, the affixing of the full stamps cannot have a retrospective effect so as to validate the original presentation, unless it has been done by order made under the second paragraph of s. 28 of the Court Fees Act. In the case of a High Court, such an order can be made only by a Judge, and by him only in cases "of mistake or inadvertence." These words mean mistake or inadvertence on the part of the Court or its officers, and not on the part of the appellant or its advisers. The expression "head of the office" in s. 28 does not refer to the head of the office of a Court, or at all events to the head of the office of a High Court, acting not as such, but as a taxing officer, but it refers to the head of a public office such as the Board of Revenue. The officer mentioned in s. 5 of the Court Fees Act is not bound to advise parties as to the stamp required under the Act, or to give them notice that they have not sufficiently stamped documents which the Act requires to be stamped before presentation. A plaint contained a prayer for a declaration (i) that certain property was the joint property of the plaintiff and (ii) that it was not liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree held by one of the defendants against another ; and, as a foundation for the latter relief, alleged collusion, fictitious transactions, and want of title. The decree in the suit, passed on the 14th September 1887, granted both the declarations prayed for. The defendants appealed to the High Court against the whole decree, and stamped their memorandum of appeal with a stamp of R10 only. On the 9th November 1887 it was tendered to a Judge for admission, and it then bore a report dated the 7th November by the officer appointed under s. 5 of the Court Fees Act, "report will be made on receipt of record." The Judge made an order, "admit, subject to stamp report," and the memorandum was then received by the office, and the appeal was entered on the register. On the 27th September 1888 the office reported that there was a deficiency in the stamp of R615; on the 9th November the taxing officer ordered that the deficiency should be made good; and on the 8th December 1888 it was made good. At the hearing of the appeal a preliminary objection was taken that the appeal had never been validly presented within time, or admitted, and that it could not be heard. Held that there was before the Court no valid appeal as to the merits of which the Court could give a decision. 30. ———— Amendment of decree, Application for—Civil Procedure Code, s. 206.—Under a proper interpretation of the preamble and s. 4 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), the rule of limitation is confined to the litigants, and is inapplicable to acts which the Court may or has to perform suo motu. S. 206 of the Civil Procedure Code empowers a Court of its own motion to amend its decree, and the mere fact that one of the parties has made an application asking the Court to exercise that power will not render the action of the Court subject to the rule of limitation. Roberts v. *Harrison, I. It was subsequently returned for amendment, and having been amended by the insertion of the words "in mouzah S, pergunnah S," after the word "share," was presented again on the 8th January 1879 after such period. Held that the date of the amendment of the plaint did not affect the question of limitation for the institution of the suit, and the return of the plaint for amendment and its subsequent presentation and acceptance by the Court did not constitute a fresh institution of the suit. At the hearing A's counsel stated that the effect of the conveyance was to vest the entirety of a certain property in A; this view was accepted by B's counsel, who did not read the conveyance. The only issue in the case was "who was in possession of the property," and the Court decided this issue on the 5th February in favour of the plaintiff. On the 26th February B brought a suit against A to set aside this conveyance on the ground of fraud. And in certain proceedings in this case taken on the 31st March, B's counsel discovered, as he alleged for the first time, that under the conveyance, a moiety of a seven twenty-fourth share remained in B. 66. ———————— Leave to appeal after time expired—Sufficient cause—Two suits brought at same time by executors raising same questions of construction in respect of the same will—Similar decision in both—Appeal by a defendant in one suit and decree of Court of first instance reversed—Consequent application by plaintiffs for leave to appeal in second suit.—The plaintiffs filed two suits (A and B) at the same time as executors of the will of one D M. In suit A they sued the two sons (G and V) of their testator for the purpose of having his will construed and of ascertaining the shares of his property taken under it by his said two sons respectively. Suit B was filed by them against G, one of the said sons of the testator, and against three other persons to whom he had mortgaged his interest in his father's estate. They alleged that G had made over possession of the whole of his father's estate to the mortgagees and that they refused to give it up. The plaintiffs submitted that, under the mortgage, no charge was created, save upon G's individual interest in the estate, and they prayed for a declaration as to the extent of the mortgage, for an order for possession, for an account, etc., etc. Suit A was heard and decided on the 15th August 1889, and after argument, the Court of first instance, construing the will, held that the fourth defendant, G, was entitled absolutely to certain property situate at the Girgaum Back Road in Bombay. Immediately after the said decree was made, suit B was called on for hearing before the same Judge. As the questions raised in both suits were the same, a decree in this suit was passed at once, without argument, in accordance with the construction put upon the will in suit A. Against the decree in suit A, V (one of the defendants therein) appealed, and, on the 27th February 1890, the Appeal Court reversed the decree of the Court below, and held that G was not entitled to an absolute estate in the abovementioned property, but was entitled only to be paid the income thereof for his life. The plaintiffs in the present suit, being executors and not personally interested, had taken no steps to appeal from the decree of the 15th August. As soon, however as the decree in suit A was reversed, they proposed to have the decree in suit B amended, so as to be in accordance with the construction put upon their testator's will by the Appeal Court. The defendants refused to consent, and the plaintiff moved for leave to file an appeal, although the time limited for appealing had expired. It was contended that the fact that they were executors and trustees and as such could not appeal, save at their own risk, was "sufficient cause," under s. 5 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1887), for their delay until the other suit had been decided. Held, refusing the application, that no sufficient cause was shown for the plaintiffs' delay. The two suits were quite independent of each other. The plaintiffs thought proper to bring this second suit against the mortgagees, and they got a decision. If they were not satisfied, they should have appealed within the proper time. There was nothing in their position as executors to entitle them to any special consideration. THUCKER VUSSONJI MOWJI v. 67. ———————— "Sufficient cause"—Decree in suit for redemption—Appeal by mortgagee—Cross-objections filed by the mortgagors—Withdrawal of the appeal by the mortgagee—Application by mortgagors for extension of time to appeal.—On the 1st March 1886, the plaintiffs (the mortgagors), obtained a redemption decree against the defendant (mortgagee), whereby it was ordered that, upon payment by the plaintiffs of R649-11-0 to the defendant, the mortgaged property should be redeemed. On the 19th April 1886, the defendant appealed to the High Court. On the 17th December 1886, the plaintiffs filed a cross-objection to the decree. On the 15th July 1890, the defendant obtained an order from the High Court allowing him to withdraw his appeal, and the plaintiffs consequently lost their opportunity of urging the cross-objection. On the 3rd September 1890, the plaintiffs applied, under s. 5 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), for an extension of time, for appealing against the decree of the 1st March 1886. Held that the withdrawal of the appeal, by which the plaintiffs lost their opportunity of having their cross-objection heard, afforded no sufficient reason for enlarging the time for the cross-appeal which he might have presented. On the 2nd March 1899, the appellants gave notice to the respondents that they would not proceed with the appeal. The respondents then applied to be allowed to appeal, alleging that they had from the first intended to appeal, but had not done so, only because the other side had filed an appeal. That being so, they had merely filed cross-objections. Held that the application should be granted. It appeared that the applicants had intended to appeal, and would have appealed, but for the fact that an appeal in the suit was already on the file. Under these circumstances, the applicants showed "sufficient cause" for not filing their appeal within s. 5 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). HURGOVINDAS PRANJIVANDAS v. JADAVAHOO [I. L. In execution of this decree, certain property was attached. B claimed this property as his own and sought to remove the attachment, but the Court passed an order confirming the attachment on the 20th November 1880. In 1881 B filed a regular suit to set aside this order. The suit was dismissed in 18 , as barred by s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Thereupon B filed an appeal from the order in execution made on 20th November 1880. This appeal was rejected as time-barred under art. 152 of sch. II of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). Held that the time spent in the actual proceedings in the suit to set aside the order in execution might be deducted in computing the delay that occurred before the appeal was filed. But the plaintiff was not entitled to a deduction of the time that intervened between the date of the order appealed against and the date of filing the suit. SITARAM PARAJI v. NIMBA VALAD HARISHET

A suit to set aside the sale was instituted in a subordinate Court, and was dismissed. The plaintiff who desired to appeal against the decree dismissing his suit, was advised that the appeal lay to the High Court, in which a memorandum of appeal was accordingly filed. On its appearing that the value of the property sold was less than R5,000 the High Court returned the memorandum of appeal for presentation to the District Court. The District Judge rejected it on the ground that it was barred by limitation, holding that the delay caused by the error, which the appellant committed in taking proceedings in the wrong Court, could not be excused. Held that the District Judge should have decided whether the appellant, under the special circumstances of the case in appealing to the High Court, acted on an honest belief formed with due care and attention, so as to bring the case within s. 14 of the Limitation Act and enable the Judge to admit the appeal under s. 5. No application for the execution of the decree was made by either the first or second plaintiff; but the third plaintiff, having attained his majority in June 1881, applied for execution in April 1884; his application was opposed by two of the defendants. Whatever may have been the effect of s. 11 of Act XIV of 1859 as to extending the privilege given to a minor to his representatives, s. 7, the corresponding section of Act IX of 1871, limits the privileges to the minor himself and his representative after his death, and therefore a purchaser from a minor cannot claim the benefit of that section. 38. ——— Suspension of right of suit for disability.—Limitation begins to run against a mother on her succeeding to a family estate as the heir of her son and under no disability, and cannot be stopped by any subsequent disability under s. 11. A dispossession by a stranger to a family of a portion of the family estate is only one cause of action to the family arising on the date of dispossession; and though, in consequence of the minority of a certain member of the family living at the time the period of limitation may under the law be enlarged, still no new cause of action accrues to a subsequently born son at the date of his birth so as to enable him to postpone again the period of limitation which has begun to run against the family. The defendant contended that, the plaintiff's brother, who was capable of giving a valid discharge to his debtors, having failed to sue within proper time, the suit was barred. On reference to the High Court,—Held that the suit was not barred The plaintiff's brother not being a party to the bond, s. 8 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877) would not apply. 3. ———— Joint decree-holders—Disability of minority—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 231, 258—Execution of decree.—S. 8 of the Limitation Act does not appear to include execution-creditors, and the classes of persons contemplated by it are joint creditors or joint claimants, one of whom is under some disability, whilst there are others who can give a valid discharge in regard to his interest without his concurrence. The question whether one of several decree-holders can enter satisfaction on behalf of all is one of procedure, and a rule of decision must be looked for in the Civil Procedure Code. Ss. 231 and 258 of that Code appear to show that it is not the act of the joint decree-holder, but the act of the Court executing the decree that is intended to operate as a valid discharge. S. 8 of the Limitation Act applies only to those cases in which the act of the adult joint owner is per se a valid discharge. SESHAN v. RAJAGOPALA. RAJAGOPALA v. RAMANADA

In a suit in 1882 to set aside the solehnama at the instance of the two daughters, the evidence showed that the sons managed the property after their father's death, and at the time the solehnama was executed. Held, on the question of limitation, that it was not to be inferred that the sons, by reason of their having managed their late father's estate, should be regarded as trustees, at the time of the execution of the solehnama, for the daughters; and therefore s. 10 of Act XV of 1877 was inapplicable. 17. ———————— Trustee — Express trustee—Absent co-sharer.—S 10 of the Limitation Act, 1877, has reference to express trustees, and in order to make a person an express trustee within the meaning of that section, it must appear either from express words or clearly from the facts that the rightful owner has entrusted the property to the person alleged to be a trustee for the discharge of a particular obligation. In 1813, S, being unable to pay the Government revenue due on his land, abandoned his village. In 1833, H, who had paid the revenue due by S and had taken, or obtained from the Government, possession of S's land, attested a village paper, in which it was stated that, if S returned and reimbursed him, he should be entitled to his land. Sixty years after S abandoned his village, B as the representative of S sued the representative of H for such land, alleging that it had vested in H in trust to surrender it to S or his heirs on demand. As evidence of such trust, B relied on the village paper mentioned above, and on the village administration paper of 1862, in which it was stated that absent co-sharers might recover their shares on payment of the arrears of Government revenue due by them. Held that such documents did not prove any express trust within the meaning of s. 10 of the Limitation Act, 1877, and the suit was therefore barred by limitation BARKAT v. DAULAT . . In the earlier accounts the names of D T and W S both appeared; in the later ones,—namely, from 1842 until they were closed in 1848,—at the head of the account there was a memorandum written in small letters, "D T, trustee," but it did not appear that W S had ever renounced the trust, or conveyed the trust estate to D T. The office of head of the muth was hereditary in the grantee's family. In 1866, an inam title-deed was issued to the then head of the muth, whereby the village was confirmed to him and his successors tax-free, "to be held without interference so long as the conditions of the grant are duly fulfilled." Yadasts addressed by tahsildars to the then head of the muth in 1872 and 1882 were put in evidence to show what the object of the grant was. It was found regard being had to usage, that the trusts of the institution were the upkeep of the muth, the feeding of pilgrims, the performance of worship, the maintenance of a watershed, and the support of the descendants of the grantee. From before 1840 it had been usual for the head of the muth for the time being to make grants to his brothers or younger sons for their maintenance. In 1842, the father of the present plaintiff being then the head of the muth granted certain lands in the village above referred to to his younger brother, the deed of grant being in terms absolute. The grantee died about thirty years before the suit, and the lands in question came into the possession of his widow (defendant No. 1) and a mortgagee from her (defendant No. 2) respectively. In 1863, the plaintiff's father placed certain other lands in possession of defendant No. 3 who paid rent therefor and received pottahs for some years from the plaintiff. In a suit by the plaintiff for possession of the lands in the possession of the defendants, it was pleaded, inter alia that the grant of 1843 was binding on him and that defendant No. 3 had a right of permanent occupancy. Held that s. 10 of the Limitation Act was applicable, and the suit was not barred by limitation SATHIANAMA BHARATI v. SARAVANABAGI AMMAL I. 17. ———— Trustee — Express trustee —Absent co-sharer.—S 10 of the Limitation Act, 1877, has reference to express trustees, and in order to make a person an express trustee within the meaning of that section, it must appear either from express words or clearly from the facts that the rightful owner has entrusted the property to the person alleged to be a trustee for the discharge of a particular obligation. In 1813, S, being unable to pay the Government revenue due on his land, abandoned his village. In 1833, H, who had paid the revenue due by S and had taken, or obtained from the Government, possession of S's land, attested a village paper, in which it was stated that, if S returned and reimbursed him, he should be entitled to his land. Sixty years after S abandoned his village, B as the representative of S sued the representative of H for such land, alleging that it had vested in H in trust to surrender it to S or his heirs on demand. As evidence of such trust, B relied on the village paper mentioned above, and on the village administration paper of 1862, in which it was stated that absent co-sharers might recover their shares on payment of the arrears of Government revenue due by them. Held that such documents did not prove any express trust within the meaning of s. 10 of the Limitation Act, 1877, and the suit was therefore barred by limitation BARKAT v. DAULAT . . In the earlier accounts the names of D T and W S both appeared; in the later ones,—namely, from 1842 until they were closed in 1848,—at the head of the account there was a memorandum written in small letters, "D T, trustee," but it did not appear that W S had ever renounced the trust, or conveyed the trust estate to D T. In 1846 D T died, leaving G and T the surviving partners of the firm, the executors of his will. W S survived D T. In 1867, the representative of G D brought a suit for an account against G and T, as the executors of D T. Held, upon the facts, that there was no proof that any specific property, the subject of the trust, had come to the hands of G and T as executors of D T, and any other claim was barred by s. 2, Act XIV of 1859. Subsequently the defendants were in sole management of the temple until 1891, when the plaintiffs brought the present suit charging that the defendants had excluded them from the right of management and claiming that they should make good sums lost to the institution by reason of breaches of trust alleged to have been committed by them Some of the breaches of trust took place before 1884 Of the others, which took place subsequently, some consisted in improper dealings with the temple property to the detriment of the temple and to the advantage of certain relatives of the defendants. The plaintiffs also asked for an injunction to restrain the defendants from excluding them from management Held (1) that in the absence of evidence of an absolute denial by the defendants of the plaintiffs right to act as trustees the suit for an injunction was not barred by limitation, (2) that the suit could not be regarded as a suit by the beneficiaries and was not within the operation of the Limitation Act, s 10; (3) that the suit was not maintainable in respect of breaches of trust committed in the lifetime of the deceased manager as being to that extent barred by limitation, and also for the reason that such breaches were not more imputable to the defendants than to the plaintiffs; (4) that even if it had been proved that the community interested in the temple had sanctioned the acts of the defendants now complained of, that circumstance would not suffice to excuse the defendants; (5) that the defendants were liable to make good the loss occasioned by any breach of trust committed within six years of the date when the suit was instituted even in the absence of fraud, and that in estimating such loss, prospective loss should be assessed. 32. ———— Trustee for specific purposes—Will, Construction of—Void clause in will and consequent intestacy—Suit by heir against executor as trustee for specific purposes.—G died without issue in 1854. By his will he appointed three executors, and after making certain bequests he directed as follows. "After all the above matters shall have been settled, whatever property of mine may remain, that remaining property shall be disposed of in a righteous manner, in a pious and charitable way, as may appear advisable to all my three executors. It shall be disposed of in such manner that people may speak well of me, and that all my three heirs may acquire great fame. The last surviving executor (the brother's widow) died in 1868, leaving a will, whereby she appointed four executors, and confirmed and continued the provisions of G's will. In 1886 C, one of G's heirs, assigned all his interest in G's estate to the plaintiff, who in 1887 filed this suit for administration. He contended that the above claim in the will was void for uncertainty; that there was therefore an intestacy as to the residue of the estate; and that the executors held such residue in trust for G's heirs within the meaning of s. 10 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877); and that the suit was therefore not barred. Held that s. 10 of the Limitation Act did not apply, and that the suit was barred by Limitation. The executors of G were no doubt trustees, and for some specific purposes property became vested in them under the will, but with regard to the residue there was no trust declared and no direction given to distribute it among the heirs-at-law. In India, suits between a cestui que trust and a trustee for an account are governed solely by the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), and, unless they fall within the exemption of s. 10, are liable to become barred by some one or other of the articles in the second schedule of the Act. To claim the benefit of s. 10, a suit against a trustee must be for the purpose of following the trust-property in his hands. If the object of the suit is not to recover any property in specie, but to have an account of the defendant's stewardship, which means an account of the moneys received and disbursed by the defendant on plaintiff's behalf, and to be paid any balance which may be found due to him upon taking the account, it must be brought within six years from the time when the plaintiff had first a right to demand it. 45. ———— Laches—Suit against directors of company—Stale demand—Trustees.—The plaintiff company was formed in 1864, and the company went into liquidation in 1867. In April 1890, the present suit was filed against the defendant, who had been one of the directors of the company, and it was alleged that, after the formation of the company, the defendant and his co-directors had carried on speculative dealings in shares of other companies and had used the funds of the company for this purpose, which was not warranted by the memorandum of association. The plaintiffs alleged that their dealings, which were duly set forth in their plaint, had resulted in a heavy loss to the company, and they now sought to recover from the defendant the sum of R3,37,700-13-5. There had been originally five directors of the company, but at the date of suit two of them were dead and two had become insolvent. Held (affirming the decision of PARSONS, J.) (1) that s. 10 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877) does not apply to directors of companies, the directors not being persons in whom the property of the company is vested as contemplated by that section. (2) That in any case, the staleness of the demand was a valid defence to the action, the liquidators of the company having had full knowledge of the facts since the company went into liquidation, but no suit was filed until the expiration of twenty-three years. The Registrar refused to accept the appeal. On the 6th September the decree was signed, and on the 7th an office copy thereof was obtained by the defendant's attorney, who, on the 8th September, served a copy at the office of the plaintiff's attorney. On the 12th September, the plaintiff applied for an office copy, which he obtained on the 13th, and on the 15th tendered such copy and his memorandum of appeal to the Registrar. The Registrar refused to accept the appeal, unless under an order of Court, it being in his opinion out of time. On the 6th December 1883, a Juge sitting on the original side admited the appeal. The appeal subsequently came on for hearing, when the defendant contended that the appeal was barred, it not having been filed within twenty days from the date of the decree. The Court held that the appeal was so barred. Held, on review, that the plaintiff having allowed five days to expire after the decree was signed before applying for a copy, and not having filed his appeal, after so obtaining a copy, at the earliest opportunity possible, such a delay being entirely unaccounted for, could not be held to be "time requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree," and that therefore the appeal was out of time. of decree.—Judgment was pronounced by the lower Appellate Court, dismissing the appeal of the plaintiff, on the 29th March 1887. The decree was signed by the Judge on the 1st April, but, in accordance with s. 579 of the Civil Procedure Code, it bore date the day on which the judgment was pronounced. On the 15th April the plaintiff applied for a copy of the decree; on the 16th she received notice that the estimate of the costs of preparing the copy was prepared; on the 19th she paid into Court the amount required by the estimate. She had notice to attend on the 23rd for delivery to her of the copy, and on the 25th she attended and received the copy. On the 12th May she presented in the High Court, to the proper officer, an application, under s. 592 of the Code, for leave to appeal as a pauper. Held that the application was barred by limitation under art. 170, sch. II of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), and that s. 5 of the Act did not apply. Per EDGE, C.J.—In computing the period of limitation prescribed for an appeal or for an application for leave to appeal as a pauper, where the decree appealed against is not signed until a date subsequent to the date of delivery of judgment, the intermediate period should, under s. 12 of the Limitation Act, be excluded if the delay in signing the decree has delayed the appellant or applicant in obtaining a copy of the decree, and not otherwise. Beni Madhub Mitter v. Matungini Dassi, I. L. R., 13 Calc., 104, referred to. A delay caused by the carelessness or negligence of a party applying for copy of decree, such as negligence in coming forward to pay the money required, cannot be taken into consideration or allowed for in computing the time requisite for obtaining the copy. The time requisite, within the meaning of s. 12 of the Limitation Act, does not mean requisite by reason of the carelessness or negligence of the applicant: it means the time occupied by the officer who has got to provide the copy, in making the copy. The important date with reference to s. 12 and art. 170 is not the date when the copy of the decree is delivered, but the date when it is ready for delivery to the applicant if the applicant chooses to apply, where he has had notice that the copy will be ready on that date. The date of the decree or order is the date on which judgment is pronounced. The time excluded from the period of limitation by s. 12 of the Limitation Act must be taken to commence only when the party appealing does something in order to obtain the copy of the judgment or decree, and to end when he obtains the copy. A party who delays to apply for such copy is not entitled to exclude the period of such delay. A party is at liberty to apply for a copy of the decree, whether the decree has been signed or not. If he has applied, but the copy cannot be prepared because the decree has not been signed, then this time and the time taken up in preparing the copy will be excluded, but so long as he has made no application, the non-signature of the decree can have no effect at all upon him. Judgment was pronounced on the 18th December 1897, rejecting an application made by a plaintiff in execution of a decree; but the bill of costs (the order as to costs being a part of the order or decree) was not signed until 18th January 1898. The plaintiff, proposing to appeal against the above order, applied for copies of the judgment and order on the 14th January. The copies were furnished to him on the 24th January 1898. The appeal was presented on the 24th February. The lower Court held the appeal barred by limitation under art. 152 of

Where the statutory period has once begun to run in respect of any cause of action, the subsequent absence of the defendant from British India will not stop it from running. The defendant adjusted and signed his account with the plaintiffs in Bombay on the 13th of January 1871, and shortly afterwards went to reside out of British India, in the territories of His Highness the Nizam. There was no subsequent payment of interest as such, and no payment of any part of the principal. Held that the plaintiffs' suit for the balance of the account was barred by the law of limitation, not having been brought within three years after the adjustment. The defendant made default in the fourth instalment, and no more instalments were paid, and no demand of payment was made until 30th January 1884. The suit was brought on 28th April 1884. The defendant had been absent from India for more than two years and three months out of the four years and four months which had elapsed between the date of the defendant's default and the date of suit. Held, dissenting from Naronji Bhimji v. *Mugniram Chandaji, I. The lower Courts determined the suit, but the High Court was unable to support their decrees in consequence of the defect, which came to light in special appeal. The plaintiffs having brought a second suit, it was held that, in computing the period of limitation, they were not entitled, under provisions of s. 15 of Act IX of 1871, to an exclusion of the time occupied by them in prosecuting the first suit. The reversionary heirs sold a share of the property, and [illegible] brought a suit for recovery of the [illegible] by the widow on the 25th April 1890, making the reversionary heirs defendants. On the 19th June 1890 the reversionary heirs were added as co-plaintiffs, and the suit was dismissed on the ground of misjoinder of causes of action on the 19th February 1891. The present suit was then brought for one moiety only of the property on the 23rd February 1891, and deduction of the time taken up by the previous proceeding was claimed. Held that, when a suit is instituted upon distinct causes of action against different sets of defendants severally, the Court may fairly be said to be "unable to entertain it" from a cause of a "like nature" with defect of jurisdiction. Held also that s. 14 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877) applied to this case, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to deduct the time during which they were prosecuting the former suit, and the present suit was not barred by limitation. The plaintiff then brought a fresh suit under Act X of 1859, making her co-sharer a party defendant, but the suit was again dismissed, and the dismissal upheld by the High Court on 14th April 1870 on the ground that the plaintiff's share was not her own, and therefore the Collector's Court had no jurisdiction to determine any question of right as between her and her co-sharer. This suit was transferred to the District Court, which on the 16th September 1878 returned the plaint to the plaintiffs on the ground that they should have sued separately. On the 23rd September 1878 R presented a fresh plaint to the District Court, which, on the 1st October 1878, made an order rejecting it, on the ground that he should have instituted the suit in the Court of the Subordinate Judge. R appealed from this order to the High Court, which affirmed it on the 28th January 1879, but observed that the plaint should be returned to R. On the 10th April 1879 R's plaint was returned to him, and on the same day he presented it to the Subordinate Judge. Held that, in computing the period of limitation, R could not claim to exclude any other period than from the 23rd September 1878 to the 10th April 1879, for from the 26th August 1878 to the 16th September 1878 he was prosecuting his suit in a Court which had jurisdiction, and the inability of that Court to entertain it did not arise from defect of jurisdiction or any cause of the like nature, but from misjoinder of plaintiffs—a defect for which he must be held responsible; and from the 16th to the 23rd September he was not prosecuting his suit in any Court, and could not claim to have that period excluded. 56. ———— Deduction of time suit is pending in Court without jurisdiction.—Where limitation is pleaded, a plaintiff was not entitled, under s. 14, Act XIV of 1859, to deduction for the time of the pendency of a suit brought by defendants upon the same cause of action, if it was not a suit in which the Courts were unable to decide the question from defect of jurisdiction or other such cause. OODOYMONEE DABEE v. BISHONATH DUTT . 9 W. R., 455

57. ———— Deduction of time suit was pending.—In a suit by an executrix, to recover, under deeds of mortgage and sale, dated, respectively, October 1837 and April 1840, executed to the testator by first defendant's deceased husband, certain villages which first defendant in 1848 and 1851 mortgaged to second and third defendants, the defendants pleaded that the suit was barred by lapse of time. For the plaintiff it was contended that the operation of the Limitation Act was suspended from 1844 until 1867, by reason of the pendency of an equity suit, commenced by bill filed by the present first defendant against the testator, to set aside the deeds of October 1837 and April 1840, which bill was dismissed by consent in June 1867. Held (reversing the decision of the lower Court) that these proceedings had no such effect; that the plaintiff might have brought a suit for ejectment at any time; and that the present suit was barred. TRANQUEBAR SAMI AYYAN v. NATHAMBEDU AMMAI AMMAL . 6 Mad., 234

58. ———— Deduction of time during which former suit for rent was pending which was dismissed for non-joinder of parties.—In suits by the Receiver of the Tanjore estate to recover rent due under muchalkas executed by defendants, the mirasidars of certain villages, agreeing to take the villages on rent for five Faslis, from 1273 to 1277, at an annual rent, the defendants pleaded limitation as to part of the rent claimed. The plaintiff claimed to be entitled to the advantage of s. 14 of that Act, because he was for a time prosecuting suits against defendants separately for the arrears of rents alleged to be barred, all which suits were dismissed on the ground that plaintiff could not sue the defendants separately while they had executed the muchalka jointly. The District Judge found for the defendant on the questions on the Act of Limitations. Held, on appeal, that the period of limitation applicable to a suit for rent was three years (under Act XIV of 1859), and that, as to the claim to the exception under s. 14, it failed at every turn. The cause of action was not the same, for there the obligation sued upon was several, here it is joint; and the Court which decided the former suits not only did not fail to decide them, but did decide them. 61. ———— Deduction of time for appeal from order under s. 246, Civil Procedure Code, 1859.—An unsuccessful claimant, instead of bringing a regular suit to establish his right as provided by s. 246, Act VIII of 1859, chose to file an appeal against the order rejecting his claim. His appeal, though successful before the lower Appellate Court, having been thrown out in special appeal, as illegal under the section above cited, he sued to set aside the order rejecting his claim. Held that he was not entitled, under s. 14, Act XIV of 1859, to deduct from the period of limitation the time during which the appeal proceedings were pending. 73. ——————— Deduction of time during which another suit was being tried. –The defendants cut down and carried away some trees which had been growing on the plaintiff's land. The plaintiff's manager brought a suit in his own name against the defendants for the value of the trees so cut and carried away. The suit was dismissed on the ground that the manager had no cause of action against the defendants. In a subsequent suit brought by the plaintiff against the defendants for the value of the same trees, he contended that the time occupied in the former suit ought to be excluded in computing the period of limitation prescribed for the second suit. Held that the provisions of Act XV of 1877, s. 14, did not apply, and that the time could not be excluded, as the reason why the previous suit was dismissed was, because it was brought in the name of the wrong person, not from defect of jurisdiction, or from any cause of a like nature. 74. ——————— Deduction of time during prosecution of suit with due diligence—Defect of jurisdiction—Cause of like nature.—On the 2nd of September 1869, a suit was instituted for, among other things, the possession of land claimed under a kobala, dated the 31st October 1867. This suit was dismissed on the ground of misjoinder of causes of action. On the 14th of April 1881, the plaintiff sued for possession of the land only. Held that the suit was not barred by limitation, as the plaintiff had, within the meaning of s. 14, been prosecuting his claim in a Court which, from a cause of "like nature" to defect of jurisdiction, was unable to entertain it. Ram Subhag Das v. *Gobind Prasad, I. The present suit was brought by all six. Held that in computing the time within which the plaintiffs had to sue, the time occupied by them in prosecuting the former suits should be deducted. Deo Prosad Sing v. *Pertab Kairee, I. 76. ——————— Deduction of time during prosecution of suit with due diligence—Defect of jurisdiction—Other cause of a like nature—Misjoinder of causes of action and parties.—Where a previous suit by the same plaintiff against the same defendant has failed by reason of misjoinder of causes of action and parties, the plaintiff in a second suit is not entitled to the extra period of limitation allowed by s. 14 of the Limitation Act, since the cause of failure of the previous suit is not due to "defect of jurisdiction" in the Court which entertained the suit, nor is it a cause "of a like nature" thereto. Deo Prosad Singh v. Pertab Kairee, I. L. R., 10 Calc., 86, dissented from. TIRTHA SAMI v. SESHAGIRI PAI [I. L. R., 17 Mad., 299

77. ——————— Multifariousness and misjoinder of parties—"Other cause of a like nature" to defect of jurisdiction—Error in procedure.—In cases in which s. 14 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, is pleaded as protecting the plaintiff from the bar of limitation, if there was an inability in the Court to entertain the former suit produced by any cause not connected in any way with want of good faith or due diligence in the plaintiff, that cause is of like nature to defect of jurisdiction within the meaning of s. 14. It is not necessary that the cause which prevented the former Court from entertaining the suit should be a cause which was independent of, and beyond the control of, the plaintiff. Hence where the inability of the Court to entertain the former suit arose from misjoinder of plaintiffs and causes of action, and there was on the plaintiff's part in the former suit no want of good faith or due diligence, the plaintiff was held entitled to the benefit of the time during which he was prosecuting the former suit, that is, from the time when the plaint in that suit was filed until the time when it was returned to the plaintiffs for amendment. Chunder Madhub Chuckerbutty v. *Ram Coomar Chowdry, B. 3. ——— Death of partner—Subsequent recovery of asset by surviving partner—Suit by administrator of deceased partner against surviving partner for recovered assets—Suit for partnership account—Form of decree.—In 1889 one H, a widow and a partner in a firm carrying on business in partnership with two persons, viz., G and B (defendants Nos. 1 and 2), in Sind and at Behrin in the Persian Gulf, died, and the partnership was then dissolved. H had no children, but it was alleged that she had adopted one P, the brother of the second defendant. On the 13th February 1890, the guardian of one K, a minor (H's husband's nephew), applied to the High Court of Bombay for letters of administration to her estate, alleging that K was her heir and next of kin. A caveat was filed by her father and others, in which they denied that K was her heir, and alleged that P had performed her funeral ceremonies. The matter came on as a suit on the 19th February 1894, when an order was made, without prejudice to any of the questions raised by the issues, dismissing the application and ordering letters of administration to H's estate to issue to the Administrator General of Bombay. Letters of administration were accordingly granted to him on the 30th March 1894. In the meantime, however, viz., on the 12th April 1893, B (defendant No. 2) had filed three suits in the High Court of Bombay, in the name of himself and G (defendant No. 1), as surviving partners of H's firm, to recover certain debts due to that firm. Disputes subsequently arose between B and G, and by a consent order of the 22nd July 1893 it was ordered that any moneys recovered in the said three suits should be paid over to a receiver (defendant No. 3), to be held by him until further order. On the 1st August 1893, consent decrees were passed in the above three suits for a total sum of R28,335, which was forthwith handed over to the receiver. On the 22nd April 1894, this suit was filed by the Administrator General of Bombay as administrator of H appointed as above stated. He claimed to recover the whole sum paid to the receiver, alleging that the first and second defendants as H's partners were largely indebted to the firm, and that the money really belonged to her estate. He prayed that the receiver might be directed to pay over the money to him, and that, if necessary, the partnership accounts should be taken. The second defendant (inter alià) pleaded that the suit was one for partnership accounts, and was barred by limitation. Held that s. 17 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877) applied, and that under its provisions the suit was not barred. 14. ——— Fraud—Knowledge kept from the Official Assignee, of his right to sue for an account of assets fraudulently transferred by an insolvent—Burden of proving when first the plaintiff had clear and definite knowledge—Account, Decree for.—Prior to and in the year 1865 the defendant's brother B carried on an extensive business in Bombay and in China. The defendant and another brother (A) carried on a separate business under the name A H. In December 1866 B became insolvent and his property vested in the Official Assignee. The present suit was brought in 1887 against the defendant by the Official Assignee to recover certain property which he alleged belonged to the insolvent and ought to be distributed among his creditors. The plaintiff alleged that in 1865 the insolvent was possessed of a very large amount of property, and that, being unwilling to meet his liabilities, he and his son and his two brothers, viz., A and the defendant R, fraudulently concealed his property from his creditors, and in September 1866 he himself went to Daman, beyond British jurisdiction. In 1881 the plaintiff, having obtained information that some of insolvent's property was in the possession of his brother A, filed a suit (No. 473 of 1881) against A, to recover it. That suit was referred to arbitration, and the plaintiff obtained a decree for R3,60,000. The plaintiff now alleged that shortly before the hearing of that suit, and subsequently, he had obtained information which led him to believe that the defendant had obtained some of the insolvent's property for which he was accountable. The defendant had been made a party to the former suit, No. 473 of 1881, for the purpose of discovery only, and it was in the course of such discovery being given that some of the above information had been obtained. The plaint then set forth, in detail, the various items of claim in respect of which the plaintiff sought to make the defendant liable. The defendant pleaded that the claims were barred by limitation. Held by SCOTT, J., that the suit was not barred by limitation. There was sufficient evidence of fraud to bring the case under s. 18 of the Limitation Act (XI of 1877). The limitation only began to run from the time the fraud became fully known to the Official Assignee, which was not until December 1885. The knowledge required by s. 18 of the Limitation Act is not mere suspicion. It must be knowledge of such a character as will enable the person defrauded to seek his remedy in Court. The Court of Appeal (SARGENT, C.J., and BAYLEY, J.) confirmed the decree of the Court of first instance, except as to one of the allowed items, which it held to be barred by limitation. Held, on appeal to the Privy Council: In order to make limitation operate when a fraud has been committed by one who has obtained property thereby, it is for him to show that the injured complainant has had clear and definite knowledge of the facts, constituting the fraud, at a time which is too remote for the suit to be brought. Suggestion of his having been defrauded does not amount to such knowledge as is required by s. 18, Act XV of 1877. In this suit it was established that the defendant, receiving in 1869, upon a voluntary transfer, some of the insolvent's assets, joined and assisted him in defrauding his creditors; and that no disclosure of this fraud was made to the Official Assignee, while the defendant did what he could to prevent the latter from seeing the accounts of the assets transferred. Held, therefore, that the burden of proof was on the defendant to show that the plaintiff had clear and definite knowledge of this fraud for more than the period of limitation. This burden had not been discharged by proof of the fact that some hints and clues had reached the Official Assignee which might have led to such knowledge; and held that the Official Assignee had been kept from knowledge of his right to sue, within the meaning of s. 18. 34. ———— Acknowledgment in writing—Deposition signed by a witness.—In a suit brought in 1890 to recover the principal and interest due on a bond, dated 1st September 1879, which provided for the repayment of the debt secured thereby within six months from the date of its execution, it appeared that the obligor had made a part payment of R50 on the 24th July 1882, which was endorsed on the bond. No other payments had been made, but the plaintiff pleaded in bar of limitation that the debt had meanwhile been three times acknowledged in writing. One of the acknowledgments relied upon was said to be contained in a deposition given by the obligor and signed by him, as a witness in a suit to which he was not a party. Held that an acknowledgment in order to satisfy the requirements of Limitation Act, s. 19, must be an acknowledgment of the debt as such and must involve an admission of a subsisting relation of debtor and creditor, and an intention to continue it until it is lawfully determined must also be evident. Semble per MUTTUSAMI AYYAR, J. (WILKINSON, J., dissenting), that a deposition given and signed by a party as a witness in a suit is as much a writing contemplated by s. 19 as is his written statement or a letter addressed by him to a third party. 35. ———— Acknowledgment in holograph will unsigned.—In a suit against the legal representative of a deceased debtor to recover the amount of the debt, it appeared that the debt was contracted more than three years, but was payable less than three years, before suit. In bar of limitation the plaintiff relied upon an admission of the debt in a draft will, written by the testator; in the first line of which his name appeared. Held per WEIR, J., that the admission in the will did not constitute an acknowledgment under Limitation Act, s. 19. 36. ———— Acknowledgment of liability in petition—Liability for contribution—Joint debtors.—By a payment into Court under an order on account of decrees for rent and revenue in arrear, due to the landlord zamindar from the joint owners of an under-tenure, their estate was saved from sale. In respect of a proportionate share of liability for money raised for this purpose one of the joint owners became liable to be sued by another of them for contribution; and a question arose as to the application of art. 61 of sch. II of the Limitation Act, 1877. More than three years before this suit all the joint owners had filed in Court a petition for the appointment of a manager of their estate, who should, out of its profits, pay debts and interest to creditors from whom had been borrowed the money for the payment into Court. Held that this was an acknowledgment of the joint debt by the co-owner who had not contributed, within s. 19 of the Limitation Act; whence had followed the legal consequences, one of which was her liability to be sued within due time for contribution. The alleged acknowledgment was written on a post-card sent by the defendant to the plaintiff. It was in Gujarati, and was as follows:—"I was bound to send R30 according to my vaida (fixed time), but on account of the receipt of the intelligence of the death of my father I have not been able to fulfil my promise. But now, on his obsequies being over, I will positively pay R30 at Shet Merwanji's. You, Sir, should not entertain any anxiety whatever in respect thereof.

56. ——— "Signing," What amounts to—Signature.—Certain letters admitting a debt were written by the authority of the debtor, who was a desai. The only words, however, of the letter which were actually in his own handwriting were the words "guru samarth" (the exalted preceptor is strong) at the beginning of each letter, and the words "kalave, bahut kay lihine, lobh karara hi rinanti" (let this be known; what more need be written; keep regard; this is the representation) at the end. It was proved by evidence that this was the usual mode of signing and authenticating letters and informal documents among the class to which the defendant belonged. Held that, by analogy, the writing of specified words by desais at the top and bottom of letters, which was shown to be the usual way amongst persons of that class, of authenticating letters was a "signing" within s. 19 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), and that the letter was a valid acknowledgment. The ground upon which it is held that the mark of an illiterate debtor is a sufficient signature, is that the signing in such a manner as i usually adopted by the debtor with the view o showing that he intends to be bound by the documen renders the document effective as an acknowledgme under the section. Whether the circumstance of th debtor not signing his name is the result of necessi as in the case of an illiterate debtor, or of custom as in the case of a class of debtors having a spec status in the community, can be of no importa GANGADHARRAO VENKATESH v. SHIDRAMAPA BAL DESAI . . . Limitation Acts do not give authority to an agent to sign an acknowledgment for his principal similar to that given by s. 20 of that Act and s. 19 of Act XV of 1877. Plaintiff relied on a letter which had been signed by defendant, after the disputed portion had become barred, and in which the defendant, after referring to the periods in respect of which the arrears of rent were due, said "I shall send by the end of Vysakha month." Held that the document contained the ingredients required by s. 25, cl. (3), of the Contract Act, and that the claim was not barred by limitation. A document sufficiently complies with s. 25 of the Contract Act when it is signed by the person to be charged, and refers to the debt in such a way as to identify it, and contains a promise to pay wholly or in part the debt referred to therein, or expresses an intention to pay which can be construed to be a "promise." To create a "promise" within the meaning of the section, it is not necessary that there should be an accepted proposal reduced to writing, a written proposal, accepted before action, becoming by the definition clause a promise when accepted. Three years afterwards both the mortgagor and the mortgagee went out of the country. The mortgagor returning first resumed possession of the land; the mortgagee returning afterwards filed a suit in 1826 to recover possession under the terms of the mortgage, and obtaining a decree in his favour, possession was restored to him by the Civil Court in 1827. When taking delivery of the possession from the Court, the mortgagee passed to the officers of the Court a receipt in which the mortgagee acknowledged having received possession of the mortgaged land as directed by the decree. The plaintiff, the representative of the original mortgagor, on the 4th of December 1880, sued the defendant, the representative of the original mortgagee, to redeem the land. Held that the suit was barred; the receipt incorporating the decree by reference did not operate as an acknowledgment of a mortgage subsisting in 1827, so as to give to the mortgagor a new period of limitation under s. 19 of Act XV of 1877. This section intends a distinct acknowledgment of an existing liability or jural relation, not an acknowledgment without knowledge that the party is admitting anything. The instalments were not paid at the fixed dates, but part-payments of the amount of the decree were made by the judgment-debtor from time to time out of Court. On the 7th May 1879, he made a part-payment and an endorsement on the decree to the following effect: "I, G, judgment-debtor of this decree, have myself paid R—, and have endorsed this payment on the decree in my own handwriting." On the 5th September 1881, the decree-holder applied for execution of the whole decree. Held by the Court that the application was governed by the rule contained in s. 19 of the Limitation Act, 1877; that the endorsement made by the judgment-debtor on the decree was an acknowledgment of liability under the decree; and that consequently the period of limitation for the application should be computed from the time such endorsement was made, and the application was therefore within time. Ramhit Rai v. *Satgur Rai, I. 8. ———— Receipt of rent—Payment of interest—Mortgage.—In 1858 land was mortgaged to the plaintiff with possession for a term of five years, and in 1861 the defendant, the mortgagor, took a lease of the land from the plaintiff under which he paid rent until 1870-71. The mortgage-debt was repayable on the expiry of the term. Plaintiff brought the suit out of which this appeal arose to recover the debt from the mortgagor. It was pleaded that the suit was barred by limitation, to which plaintiff replied that the receipt of rent was in fact a payment of interest, and that from the last payment of interest a new period of limitation arose. Held that the case being governed by the provisions of Act IX of 1871, the payment of rent under an agreement entirely independent of the original mortgage could not be regarded as a payment of interest. They alleged that the sum was lodged on the condition that it was to be returned with interest on demand. It appeared that small sums were paid by K to the plaintiffs from time to time, and entries of interest were made in the defendants' books as being credited to the plaintiffs. The defendants contended that the suit was barred. For the plaintiffs it was contended that the entry of interest in the defendants' book was made in the plaintiffs' presence and amounted to a payment of interest within the meaning of s. 20 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). Held that such an entry did not amount to payment of interest within the meaning of the section so as to save limitation. The bond provided that B should receive the assessment, and, after making certain payments, should retain the balance in lieu of interest until the principal debt should be repaid. The bond was not registered. The assessment was duly received by B until April 1887. In February 1890, B filed this suit to recover the principal sum from A personally, relinquishing his claim against the land, as the bond was not registered. A pleaded limitation. B contended that the receipt of the assessment in lieu of interest was a payment of "interest as such" within the meaning of s. 20 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), and that the last of such payments having been made within three years before suit, his claim was not barred. Held that the suit was barred by limitation. The assignment of the "vahivat of assessment" contained in the bond was an assignment of a benefit arising out of immoveable property within the meaning of s. 17

The action was brought on a lease which expired in 1854. The defendant denied the lease, and contended that the suit should be dismissed, as it could not be maintained by the widow in her own name. In 1871, the son, who had in the meantime attained his majority in 1865, was made a co-plaintiff on his own application. Held that the suit was barred, inasmuch as it must, if maintainable, be deemed to have been instituted in 1871, when the son was made a co-plaintiff, the plaint previously to that time having been in the widow's own name and expressly on her own behalf. Held also that making the son a co-plaintiff in 1871 could not change the character of the suit as it had existed previous to that date, so as to defeat the law of limitation. Held (by PINHEY, J.) that the minor was wrongly made a plaintiff in 1871. Dhurm Dass Pandey v. *Sham Soondri Dabiah, 6 W. 4. ———— Act IX of 1871, s. 1 and s. 22—"Commenced," "Instituted"—Added defendants—Suit for contribution or partnership account—Cause of action.—Quære—Whether the word "commenced" in s. 22 of Act IX of 1871 is equivalent to the word "instituted" in s. 1, and whether s. 1 does not exclude from the operation of the Act all suits instituted before 1st April 1873, even as to defendants added after that date. Supposing the provisions of s. 22 of Act IX of 1871 to apply to defendants added by amendment subsequently to 1st April 1873, in a suit instituted before that date, such added defendants will, under the terms of that section, and if that section does not apply, then under a general principle of law, be allowed to reckon the period of limitation on which they rely from the date at which they were added, but the periods of limitation provided by Act IX of 1871 do not necessarily apply to defendants so added. The plaintiff and three of the defendants, being four members of a partnership, consisting of seven persons, borrowed, in January and February 1865, on account of the partnership, from the Commercial, Finance, and Stock Exchange Corporation, two sums of R1,21,614 and R1,08,000, for which they gave their joint and several promissory notes, and shortly afterwards two of the partners retired, leaving the plaintiff and the four defendants alone constituting the firm. On 27th September 1865, the plaintiff and first defendant were sentenced to transportation for life, and on 1-th April 1867 one of the other defendants became insolvent. On 25th April 1867, the liquidators of the Commercial, Finance, and Stock Exchange Corporation obtained a decree against the plaintiff and the three defendants who had joined in the making of the promissory notes for the amount due on their joint and several promissory notes and costs. In March 1868, the immoveable and moveable property of the plaintiff and the moveable property of the first defendant were sold in execution, and the whole of the proceeds of the plaintiff's immoveable property, together with the balance of the proceeds of the moveable properties of the plaintiff and first defendant, after satisfying thereout two prior decrees against them, were applied in part satisfaction of the decree of 25th April 1867, and the moneys so recovered were distributed to the shareholders by the liquidators, who, however, retained in their hands such portion as would have been payable in respect of the shares held by the judgment-debtors, and thus the whole decree was satisfied, leaving a balance of R25,212. The distribution of assets was made on 3rd April 1869, and the final dividend to shareholders other than the judgment-debtors paid on 3rd August 1869. The two defendants other than the first and the insolvent took the benefit of Act XXVIII of 1865, and obtained their discharge in April and December 1869. The plaintiff therefore sued the first defendant alone on 18th March 1873 as contributory for the satisfaction of the joint decree, but subsequently, by amendment made on the 6th February 1874, added the other defendants, and prayed for a decree that he was entitled to receive and appropriate the balance of R25,212, and that the first defendant should pay to the plaintiff the balance of the moneys paid by him in excess of his share in satisfying the decree of 25th April 1867, with interest, after deducting three-fourths of the sum of R25,212, on that, if necessary, the partnership accounts might be taken, and the plaintiff be paid such sums as might be found to be due to him. Held, first, that the period of limitation as to all the defendants was that provided by Act XIV of 1859, whether the suit was to be treated as one for a partnership account, or one for contribution of an ascertained sum. Second, that as to the first defendant, the period of limitation was to be reckoned back from 18th March 1873. Third, that as to the added defendants, the period of limitation was to be reckoned back from 6th February 1874. Fourth, that the plaintiff's cause of action arose in April 1868, when his property was sold and applied in satisfaction of the joint decree of 25th April 1867, and not on the date of the decree itself. Subsequently, finding that his supposition had been erroneous, he applied to have real purchaser made a party, and the heirs of the decree-holder (who had died) substituted as defendants. Held that the suit against the heirs was not barred by lapse of time, as it was originally brought within the period of limitation against the decree-holder, of whose death the plaintiff first learnt the news from the return made to the summons. 13. ——————— Parties to suit—Transfer of defendants to category of plaintiff, Effect of—Land Registration Act (Beng. Act VII of 1876), s. 7.—A and B, two joint zamindars, having brought a patni within their zamindari to sale for arrears of rent, purchased it themselves. During the existence of the patni a dar-patni had been created of which C was in possession. A instituted a suit against C to recover arrears of rent of the dar-patni for a period of three years, and joined B as a pro formâ defendant, alleging that he was away from home at the time of the institution of the suit, and could not therefore join as co-plaintiff. A's proprietary interest was registered under the provisions of Bengal Act VII of 1876, the Land Registration Act, but B's interest was not so registered. Prior to the suit coming on for hearing, but after the right to recover the rent for the first two out of the three years had become barred by limitation, assuming no suit to have been brought, B was transferred from the category of defendant in the suit into that of co-plaintiff. In answer to the suit, C pleaded limitation, and also contended that the non-registration of B's interest precluded the plaintiffs from maintaining the suit at all (A's share not being specified), having regard to the provision of s. 78 of the Land Registration Act. The lower Appellate Court having dismissed the suit on this latter ground, and also held that the right to recover the rent for the first two out of the three years as suit was barred by limitation, —Held that, when B was sued as a party-defendant, he was made a party in violation of the rule applied in Dwarka Nath Mitter v. Tara Prasunna Roy, I. L. R., 17 Calc., 160, and that the suit was not therefore in the first instance properly brought. B not being properly on the record at all, that the effect of making B co-plaintiff was practically to institute a new suit on the date when he was so changed into co-plaintiff, and that the suit had been rightly dismissed on the ground of limitation so far as the rent of the first two years was concerned, but that the plaintiffs were entitled to a decree for the rent in respect of the third year which was not barred by limitation at the time B was made co-plaintiff. 14. ——————— Parties changed from defendants to plaintiffs.—The plaintiff claiming to be entitled, together with two of the defendants, to the office of archaka of a temple, sued in 1889 for a declaration of his title, and for a declaration that an agreement entered into by them in 1886 with the other defendants was void as having been executed under coercion, and because part of the consideration was the withdrawal of a pending criminal charge of trespass and theft against them. These averments were proved. The first-named defendants were made plaintiffs in the suit more than three years after the execution of the agreement. Held that the first plaintiff was entitled to a declaration of the invalidity of the agreement, but not the others who had been joined as plaintiffs more than three years from its date. The suit was filed on the 9th October 1895. Disputes subsequently arose between her and her father-in-law as to the succession to her husband's property, and she applied to the High Court for letters of administration. On the 9th September 1896, the plaintiff's father-in-law, on his application, was made a co-plaintiff in the suit. Subsequently the plaintiffs came to terms, and the widow withdrew her application for letters of administration, and her father-in-law applied for and obtained letters of administration instead. On the 14th November 1896, the suit came on for hearing. The first plaintiff did not produce any letters of administration or certificate under the Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889). The second plaintiff produced the letters of administration obtained by him. Held that the suit was barred by s. 22 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). When the second plaintiff was added as a party, the suit was barred as against him. If the letters of administration had been obtained by the first plaintiff, her suit would not have been barred, and the Court could have passed a decree in her favour. S. 22 of the Limitation Act in terms applies as well to plaintiffs suing in their representative capacity as in their personal capacity. Held also that the second plaintiff was properly joined as a party plaintiff. The dates of the causes of action set forth in the plaint were, respectively, the 12th September 1891, the 12th March 1892, February 1892, and 12th October 1892. In the course of the proceedings, the defendant ascertained that Ravji was not the real owner of the land, but had purchased it and was holding it benami for his uncle. Ravji admitted that he had no interest in the land. On the 30th March 1895, Ravji's uncle applied to be made a party to the suit, and was thereupon added as second plaintiff. The Subordinate Judge on the merits passed a decree awarding damages to the second plaintiff. The defendant appealed, and in appeal for the first time objected that Ravji (plaintiff No. 1), being only a benamidar, could not bring the suit in his own name, and that the claim of the second plaintiff, or a large portion of it, was barred by limitation under s. 22 of the Limitation Act. right—Cessation of user—Actual user.—No rule can be laid down as to what would or would not constitute a continuance of the enjoyment as of right of a right of way, when there has been no exercise of it for any given period; that must depend upon the circumstances of each case and the nature of the right claimed. For the plaintiff to succeed in a suit for the declaration of a right of way, as acquired under s. 26 of the Limitation Act, conceding that he need not prove an actual user of the way up till the end of the statutory period of twenty years, there must, when there is no user for a long time, be circumstances from which the Court can infer the continuance of enjoyment as of right over the whole statutory period, and the cessation of the user must be at least consistent with such continuance. The enjoyment required by the Act cannot be in abeyance, and at the same time continue so as to give the plaintiff the special right claimed. The question of continued enjoyment is an inference to be drawn from facts, rather than one of fact, and if there are no facts to sustain the inference, a decision in favour of such enjoyment cannot stand. The plaintiffs sued the defendant for the declaration of a right of way, as acquired under s. 26 of the Limitation Act, over a plot of land belonging to the defendant. It was alleged that in April 1892 the defendant dispossessed the plaintiffs from the dominant tenement; and that the plaintiffs sued the defendant for recovery of possession of it under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act, and, having obtained a decree, got possession on the 19th June 1895. It was further alleged that thereupon the defendant, on the 21st June 1895, obstructed the disputed way by erecting sheds. The present suit was instituted on the 25th November 1895. Held that, the enjoyment of the right of way on the part of the plaintiffs not having continued until within two years of the institution of the suit, the suit must fail. Koylash Chunder Ghose v. *Sonatun Chung Barooie, I. 14. ——— Construction of statute—Act when applicable to Crown—Easement—Profit à prendre—Right of pasturage claimed by a village against Government—Prescription—Custom.—The rule of construction according to which the Crown is not affected by a statute unless specially named in it applies to India. Semble—The provisions of s. 26 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877) do not apply to the Crown. The mere mention of the Crown in an Act has not the effect of making all its provisions applicable to the Crown, and s. 26 does not relate to the limitation of suits, but to an entirely different matter, viz., the creation of rights by the enjoyment of them, which is a branch of the substantive law. The section is clearly in prejudice of the Crown's rights, and the other provisions of the Act do not afford sufficient evidence of an intention that this section should apply to the Crown. The rule of English law, that a claim to a profit à prendre cannot be acquired by the inhabitants of a village, either by custom or prescription, does not apply to a right of pasturage claimed by a village in the Presidency of Bombay as against the Government. The right of free pasturage has always been recognized as a right belonging to certain villages, and must have been acquired by custom or prescription. The plaintiffs, who were the inhabitants of the village of Dani Limbda, sued for themselves and the other inhabitants to establish their right to graze their cattle on the banks and the dry part of the village tank Chandola, and for a perpetual injunction restraining the defendant from interfering with such right. The defendant contended (inter alià) that the tank was kharabo or waste land, that it had never been set apart under the Land Revenue Code, s. 38, for grazing purposes, and that the plaintiffs could not acquire, as against the Government, a right of grazing by prescription. The Court of first instance held the defendant not excluded from the operation of s. 26 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), but found that there was a break in the period of prescription, and therefore rejected the plaintiffs' claim. The lower Appellate Court held that there was no break, and awarded their claim. On appeal by the defendant to the High Court,—Held, restoring the decree of the Court of first instance, that the suit should be dismissed. Whether the plaintiffs' claim was considered with regard to s. 26 of the Limitation Act or to the general law of prescription, it was essential that the user should have been as "of right" to graze cattle on the tank in question. But the right of free pasturage which certain villages enjoy according to the recognized custom of the country, and which was admittedly enjoyed by the plaintiffs' village, does not necessarily confer the right of pasturage on any particular piece of land, although it may confer the right of having sufficient land set apart for the purposes of the village, and in the

12. ——————— and arts. 91 and 95—Extinguishment of right and title—Plea of fraud—Fraudulent sale—Vendor's right to plead fraud after twelve years from the date of sale—Vendor and purchaser.—In 1872 the plaintiffs induced the first defendant by fraud and misrepresentation to execute in their favour a deed of sale of the property in dispute. They did not pay the purchase-money nor obtain possession of the property. The defendant remained in possession, and in 1873 mortgaged the property with possession to defendants Nos. 2 and 3, and in 1880 sold it to defendant No. 2. In 1884 the plaintiffs sued for possession of the property, relying on their title under the sale-deed. The defendant impeached the deed as fraudulent and disputed the plaintiffs' title. The plaintiffs contended that, as the defendant had not sued to set aside the deed on the ground of fraud within three years, as provided by art. 91 or 95 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), or within twelve years from the date of sale, it was too late for him to set up the plea of fraud. Held (SCOTT, J., doubting) that the defendant's right to raise the plea of fraud was not barred by the law of limitation. Per SCOTT, J.—There was another point of limitation which could be raised. The consideration-money was never paid by the plaintiffs, and possession was never given. There was no complete contract of sale passing the property. Therefore the plaintiffs' only right was to sue for specific performance of the contract. Such a suit, however, became barred in three years after the date of the contract. The plaintiffs therefore had lost their rights against defendant No. 1; and even if they had not, the present claim for possession as against defendants Nos. 2 and 3 must fail, as defendant No. 2 was mortgagee and defendant No. 3 was bonâ fide purchaser for value, and no satisfactory evidence was given by plaintiffs, on whom lay the onus that these defendants had notice of the deed of sale. Per JARDINE, J—S 28 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877) does not apply to the case of defendants, who rely on an actual possession which has never been disturbed. In November 1875, arrangements having been made by him to satisfy the decree in execution of which such property had been attached, the attachment was removed. In December 1875, he acknowledged having received possession of such property in execution of his decree. K sued him in November 1876 to enforce his right of pre-emption in respect of such property. Held that limitation ran from the date when B obtained such possession of the status of his conditional vendor as entitled him to mutation of names and to the exercise of the rights of an owner, and that the suit was barred by limitation. On the 23rd March 1880, a suit was brought against him to enforce a right of pre-emption in respect of the property. Held that the period of limitation for such suit ran, not from the expiration of the year of grace, but from the 30th April 1879, the date the conditional vendee obtained possession in execution of his decree. partition and divided into separate mehals. Subsequently, by two deeds of sale executed on the 13th January 1884, and registered on the 17th January 1884, some of the original co-sharers sold to strangers their shares in all three villages. At the time of the sale, the shares in two of the villages were in possession of the vendees under a possessory mortgage, the amount due upon which was set off against the purchase-money. The share in the third village was, at the time of the sale, in possession of another of the original co-sharers under a possessory mortgage. On the 17th January 1885, this last-mentioned co-sharer brought a suit against the vendors and the vendees to enforce his right of pre-emption under the wajib-ul-urz in respect of the shares sold in the three villages. Held that in the case of the sale of an equity of redemption by the mortgagor to the mortgagee in possession, which has the effect of extinguishing the right to redeem by a merger of the two estates in the mortgagee, it cannot properly be said that any property is sold which is capable of "physical possession" within the meaning of art. 10, sch. II of the Limitation Act. In a statute, such as the law of limitation, which contemplates notice, express or implied, to the party to be affected by some act done by another in respect of which a right accrues to him to impeach it, and as to which time begins to run against him quoad his remedy from a particular point, the word "physical" implies some corporeal or perceptible act done which of itself conveys or ought to convey to the mind of a person notice that his right has been prejudiced. An equity of redemption is not susceptible of possession of this description under a sale by which it is transferred, and a pre-emptor impeaching such a sale has one year from the date of registration of the instrument of sale within which to bring his suit. Held, therefore, that the period of limitation began to run from the date of the registration of the deed of sale, and that the suit was within time. II, Act XV of 1877, to establish his title to, and to recover possession of, the property which has been the subject-matter of a claim in execution-proceedings, and in respect of which an order has been made under s. 280 of the Code. G in execution of a decree attached certain immoveable property belonging to the plaintiff, whereupon B preferred a claim, and on the 10th March 1881 got the attachment removed. On the 20th July 1881, B sold the property to K. In 1882 G instituted a suit against B to set aside the order of the 10th March 1881, and to have it declared that the property was liable to attachment as belonging to the plaintiff. K was not made a party to that suit, and it was eventually compromised between G and B, the plaintiff's title being admitted. G thereupon again attached the property, and was met by a claim preferred by K, which was allowed on the 15th August 1883. G then brought another suit against K to obtain relief similar to that claimed in his suit against B, but his suit was dismissed on the 17th February 1885. On the 25th September 1885, the plaintiff instituted a suit against G, B, and K to obtain a declaration of his title to, and to recover possession of the property. It was contended that the suit was barred by limitation, being governed by art. 11, sch. II of Act XV of 1877, inasmuch as it was brought more than one year after the date of the order of the 15th August 1883. Held that the suit was not such a suit as was contemplated by s. 283 of the Code of Civil Procedure, not being one to establish any right which was the subject-matter of the litigation in the execution-proceedings, and that consequently the provision of art. 11 did not apply to it, and it was not barred by limitation. The mortgage-deed stated that V owed the mortgagee another debt of R100, which was due on a separate bond, and it contained a clause in the following terms:—"The principal sum of huns (coins) due on that document, as also this document, I will pay at the same time and take back the land along with this document as well as that document. Till then you are to continue to enjoy the land * * *." The plaintiff, having obtained a decree against the mortgagor, attached the land in execution. The defendant (son of the original mortgagee) thereupon claimed that he held a mortgage upon it to the extent of R164. On the 9th March 1881, the Court executing the plaintiff's decree made an order allowing the defendant's claim only to the extent of R64, and directing that the land should be sold, subject to the defendant's lien for that sum. The plaintiffs bought the land at the execution-sale, and offered the defendant R64 in redemption of his mortgage, which the defendant refused. The plaintiffs then brought the present suit to recover possession. Held that the charge on the land did not include the old debt of R100. There were no words in the mortgage-deed expressly making that debt a charge on the property. The provisions in the deed only made the equity of redemption conditional on the payment of both the debts. Quære—Whether, under the circumstances of the case, the purchaser at the execution-sale would be bound by such a condition. Held also that the object of the defendant's application in March 1881 was virtually that the Court should allow his mortgage to the extent of R164, and the Court having allowed his claim only to the amount of R64 by its order, pro tanto, rejected his application. It was therefore an order passed against him, and having neglected to establish his right by suit within a year from the date of that order, he was now estopped from insisting on the condition. 55. ——————— Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 283—Order passed in attachment proceedings not binding on judgment-debtor if not a party—Order passed without investigation—Suit to set aside the order.—One A was in possession of certain land as plaintiff's tenant, and in his lifetime mortgaged it with possession to the first defendant. After A's death, defendant No. 1 obtained a money-decree against A's heirs, and in execution attached the land. Thereupon the plaintiff sought to raise the attachment on the ground that A was merely a tenant-at-will whose interest ceased at his death. Defendant No. 1 contended, on the other hand, that A was a permanent tenant, and that his interest, as such, had descended to his heirs and was liable to attachment. On the 20th February 1892, the Court ordered the attachment to be removed without deciding the question raised by the parties which it held could not be determined in such a proceeding. Defendant No. 1 did not bring any suit under s. 283 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), to set aside the order and establish his right to the land. In 1894 the plaintiff filed the present suit against the first defendant and the heirs of A to recover possession of the land. The Subordinate Judge passed a decree in his favour against the first defendant, holding that the order in the attachment proceedings was conclusive against the latter, no suit having been filed by him within a year under s. 283 of the Civil Procedure Code. He, however, refused to pass any decree against the heirs of A, inasmuch as they had not been parties to the attachment proceedings, and, moreover, were not in possession of the land. On appeal, this decree was confirmed. The first defendant appealed to the High Court. Held (reversing the decree of both the lower Courts) that the case must be remanded and tried on the merits. BY PARSONS, J., on the ground that, although the order in the attachment proceedings had become conclusive as against the first defendant, it did not affect A's heirs, who had not been parties to it. As against them, therefore, the plaintiff had to prove his title, and if he failed to do so, he could not recover. The first defendant being in possession might set up this jus tertii, and might plead the title of the other defendants. BY RANADE, J., on the ground that the order in the attachment proceedings having been passed without investigation of the question there raised by the parties it did not become conclusive against the first defendant notwithstanding his failure to bring a suit within twelve months to set it aside, and that he was not precluded from raising his defence in the present suit. 56. ——————— Suit on title after summary order—Omission of judgment-debtor to set aside summary order—Right of purchaser from judgment-debtor to sue.—On the 24th March 1879 a certain property was attached in execution of a money-decree against S, and was finally sold on the 22nd September 1879 and purchased by the plaintiffs' father. Subsequently to the attachment, the defendant caused the same property to be attached in execution of his decree against R. On the 15th August 1879, S intervened and claimed the property as his own, but his claim was disallowed, and the property was sold on the 4th August 1880 and purchased by the defendant himself. On proceeding to take possession, the plaintiffs obstructed him, but the obstruction was disallowed on the 28th July 1882, and they were dispossessed. The plaintiffs therefore brought a suit to recover possession. The Court of first instance rejected their claim, on the ground that the omission on the part of S to sue to set aside the summary order passed against him on the 15th August 1879 barred the plaintiffs. The lower Appellate Court reversed that decree. On appeal by the defendant to the High Court,—Held, confirming the decree of the lower Appellate Court, that the plaintiffs' suit was not barred: the plaintiffs' father having purchased under the attachment, dated 24th March 1879, and having then acquired by his purchase the interest of S as it stood at that date, that interest could not be affected by any subsequent act or omission of the judgment-debtor, S. The defendant intervened in 1878, and set up a previous purchase of the house by himself from the plaintiff. The attachment was removed. The judgment-creditor brought a suit against the defendant for a declaration that the property belonged to the plaintiff, and as such was liable to be attached and sold in execution. At the hearing of this suit the judgment-creditor did not appear. The defendant appeared, and produced a sale-deed, which the Court found proved, and dismissed the judgment-creditor's suit. The plaintiff now brought the present suit against the defendant to recover possession of the house. It was contended for the defendant that the plaintiff, as the judgment-debtor, might at any rate be regarded as a party against whom the order in the execution-proceedings in 1878 was made, and that the present suit was therefore barred by limitation. Held that the plaintiff could not be regarded as a party to those proceedings. Whether a judgment-debtor is to be regarded as a party to an investigation under s. 278 of the Code, must depend upon the facts of each case. As the question of limitation was raised for the first time on second appeal, it could not be decided against the plaintiff. SHIVAPA v. DOD NAGAYA

though erroneous and liable to be set aside in the way presented by the procedure law, is not a nullity, but remains in full force until set aside, and a sale held in pursuance of such order is, until set aside, a valid sale: a suit to set aside such a sale is governed by art. 12, cl. The word "disallowed" in s. 312 of the Civil Procedure Code has no reference to an order passed on an appeal, but refers to the disallowance of the objection by the Court before which the proceedings under s. 311 are taken. On the 15th June 1878, a judgment-debtor filed a petition objecting to execution of a decree against him proceeding on the ground that the decree was barred. On the 18th November 1878, that objection was overruled and certain of his property sold. Against the order overruling his objection the judgment-debtor appealed, and ultimately, on the 13th January 1880, the order was set aside by the High Court, and the decree was held to have been barred. Pending these proceedings, the judgment-debtor also, on the 17th December 1878, applied, under the provisions of s. 311 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), to set aside the sale on the ground of material irregularity, but that application was ultimately rejected on the 17th May 1879, and the sale was confirmed on the 21st May 1879. On the 2nd April 1880, the judgment-debtor applied to set aside the sale on the ground that the decree, in execution of which it had taken place, had been held to be barred, and though an order setting aside the sale was made by the original Court, it was subsequently set aside by the High Court on the 13th April 1881, as having been made without jurisdiction. The judgment-debtor now brought a suit on the 4th January 1882 upon the same grounds to set aside the sale and recover possession. Held that the suit was barred. 27. ———————— Endowment by Hindu—Execution-proceedings against manager, Suit to set aside.—In 1866, V (the father of the plaintiff) sued his brother H and G (one of the two sons of H and defendant No. 1) to establish his right to a third share of the management of certain lands granted for the maintenance of a Hindu temple. In that suit V obtained a decree that he should have the exclusive management every third year, but was ordered to pay costs. To enforce payment of these costs, H in execution of the decree attached the third share of V in the management of the land. The share was accordingly sold by auction in January 1870 to a Marwadi, who afterwards, in May 1870, resold it to the appellant T (another son of H and defendant No. 2). V died in 1876. In 1879 the plaintiff sued G and the appellant (the two sons of H) for his share of the management. It was contended for the defence that, as the execution-sale of January 1870 was not set aside within a year, the right to treat it as void by the plaintiff was barred by art. 12 of sch. II of Act XV of 1877. Quære—Whether V could have got himself reinstated in the management without bringing a suit to set aside the sale within a year from the date of the order confirming it. 28. ———————— Rights of purchasers at sales in execution of decree—Two judicial sales of the same property, each in execution of a separate decree—Conflicting claims thereunder—Purchase pendente lite—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), sch. II, art. 13.—The same property having been sold in execution of two different decrees, the result was that the two purchasers at the respective sales afterwards contested title to the property. The sale to the first purchaser was confirmed in November 1882. The sale to the second, who obtained possession, took place in October 1881, the property having been attached under the second decree in March 1883. The first purchaser on the 28th July 1884 brought a suit, to which the second purchaser was not a party, to have that attachment declared invalid. By a decree of the 14th November to that effect the second purchaser was bound as a purchaser pendente lite; and his possession was of no avail to him. Held that the attachment of March 1883, although it had preceded the institution of the first purchaser's suit of 1884, afforded no support to the second purchaser's claim, attachment under Ch. XIX of the Civil Procedure Code merely preventing alienation, and not giving title. Moreover, after the first sale in 1882 there had been no interest left to be sold to another purchaser, so that, without there having been the decree of 1885, the second purchaser would still have had no title against the first. There was no occasion for the setting aside the second sale within the meaning of arts. 12 and 13 of sch. II of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877); nor was it set aside. That sale was held not to affect the right of the first purchaser, there being a wide difference between setting aside a sale and deciding that a plaintiff's right was not affected by it. The plaintiff was then a minor and his estate was administered by the Collector of Ratnagiri. In this suit he was represented by his mother and guardian. At the sale held in 1871, in execution of the decree, the property in question was purchased by the defendant, who obtained possession in 1876. In 1879 the plaintiff attained majority, and in 1882 he brought the present suit to recover the property from the defendant. The lower Courts, regarding the suit as one to set aside the sale to the defendant, held that it was barred by limitation under art. 12 of sch. II of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). On appeal by the [illegible] Court,—Held that art. 12 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877) did not apply, and that the suit was not barred. That article applied only to cases in which

On the 21st August 1885 the defendant attached, in execution of a money-decree, certain immoveable property belonging to his judgment-debtor. On the 18th January 1886, plaintiff, who held another decree against the same judgment-debtor, applied, under s. 295 of the Code of Civil Procedure, for a rateable distribution of the assets to be realized by the sale of the property attached. On the 19th March 1886 the attached property was put up for sale in execution of the defendant's decree. The defendant was allowed to buy the property at the sale and set off the purchase-money against the amount due to him under the decree under s. 294, and no money was therefore paid into Court. On the 14th June 1886 the Court held that, as no money had been paid into Court on account of the sale, no further proceedings could be taken on the plaintiff's application for a rateable share of the assets, and his application was accordingly rejected. Thereupon the plaintiff sued the defendant to compel him to refund the assets wrongly paid to him. The Court of first instance decided in plaintiff's favour. The lower Appellate Court rejected the plaintiff's claim as barred by art. 13, sch. Act I of 1880), ss. 20, 21, and 22—Act or order of Settlement officer—Dhara lands—Suit for a declaration that lands were khoti lands—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—Collector, Power of—Adverse possession—Cause of action.*—A Survey Settlement officer decided in the year 1882 that certain lands situate at the khoti village of Tadil, in the Ratnagiri District, were dhara lands of S and another, but the entry in the survey register that they were dhara lands was not made till 1889. In the meanwhile, F and others, who were the khots of the village, made an application to the special Survey officer to revise the decision of the Settlement officer of the year 1882, and the special Settlement officer having rejected this application in 1885, they brought the present suit in 1887 against S and others for a declaration that the lands were their khoti lands. The Judge dismissed the suit on the ground that the Settlement officer's decision being final under ss. 20 and 21 of the Khoti Settlement Act (Bombay Act I of 1880) and it having not been set aside within one year from its date, the suit was time-barred under art. 14, sch. II of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). Held, reversing the decree, that the claim was not time-barred. Under ss. 20 and 21 of the Khoti Settlement Act, it is the "decision" on the rival claims of the parties which is open to reversal by the Civil Court, and not the consequences of that decision, which as provided by s. 22 are left to the Collector himself to undo or modify in accordance with the decision of the Civil Court. Held, further, that s. 21 does not contemplate any "order" being made by the Survey officer between the parties; and even if framing the register be regarded as an "act" of the Survey officer, s. 22 provides for its being amended by the Collector himself, in accordance with the decision of the Civil Court. Held, further, that although the defendants might have paid only the assessment before 1878-79, their adverse possession of the lands as dhara did not begin to run against the plaintiffs until 1878-79, when such a claim was actively advanced by the defendants. The plaintiffs' cause of action arose in 1882, when the Survey officer determined that the lands were dhara, and the present suit, which was brought within six years to reverse that decision, was therefore in time. On the 12th November 1895, the Revenue Commissioner, on appeal against the order of the Collector, ordered it to be given to defendant No. 2 on his paying the assessment due since the survey settlement. This order was communicated to the plaintiff on the 20th November 1895. On the 16th November 1895, the plaintiff was ousted by the order of the Collector, and defendant No. 2 was placed in possession. The plaintiff thereupon, on the 15th November 1896, filed the present suit in the District Court against the Secretary of State for India as defendant No. 1 and defendant No. 2 praying (1) to have set aside the order passed by the Revenue Commissioner, (2) to have his right to the land established, and (3) to obtain possession with mesne profits. Defendants contended that the suit was time-barred under art. 14, sch. II of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), not having been brought within one year from the 12th November 1895, the date of the Revenue Commissioner's order. Held that the plaintiff could maintain a suit for the recovery of his land without having the order of the 12th November 1895, passed by the Revenue Commissioner, set aside. Held, further, that the order of the Revenue Commissioner was not such an order as is contemplated by art. 14, sch. II of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), and that in itself it gave no cause of action, and needed no setting aside. The cause of action was given by the act of the Collector dispossessing the plaintiff on the 16th November 1895, and as the suit was brought within one year of that date, it was in time. In attempting to recover possession he was obstructed by the defendant who claimed the property as her own. Summary proceedings under s. 269 of Act VIII of 1859 were thereupon instituted against the defendant, and the defendant's claim was upheld by an order passed on the 7th November 1872. In the meantime the plaintiff's husband having died, plaintiff filed, on the 31st March 1873, a regular suit to establish her title. On the 8th July 1873, she obtained a second certificate, and registered it. The Court of first instance awarded her claim, but on appeal by the defendant the lower Appellate Court reversed that decree, on the ground that, at the institution of the suit, plaintiff had not a registered certificate of sale. That decree was confirmed on the 17th November 1879 on second appeal, by the High Court. On the 30th April 1880, plaintiff brought this suit on the strength of her registered certificate. The Court of first instance allowed her claim. The defendant appealed, and the lower Appellate Court held her suit not maintainable. On appeal by plaintiff to the High Court,—Held confirming the decree of the lower Appellate Court, that plaintiff's suit was barred. The Subordinate Judge having, by his order of the 7th November 1872, passed in the summary proceedings disposed of the case on the ground that the property belonged to the defendant, the plaintiff was under an obligation to displace that order by a suit instituted within one year from its date. This sum having been paid into Court, A lost possession of the zamindari. On January 5th, 1875, A had mortgaged the whole zamindari, which consisted of 22 villages, to M to secure a loan of R1,00,000 borrowed by A to pay off the debts of B which A undertook to pay in 1861. On June 27th, 1879, A being indebted to M in the sum of R1,78,000 paid M R1,00,000 and undertook to pay the balance out of the income of the estate, M releasing the 22 villages from the mortgage of January 5th, 1875. On June 28th, 1879, A executed a mortgage of the 22 villages to L to secure repayment of R1,30,000. Of this sum, R1,00,000 was borrowed to pay M, and R30,000 was a prior debt due by A to L. Of the R1,00,000 paid to M, R27,000 was specially applied to discharge so much of the charge created by the mortgage of January 5th, 1875. On January 30th, 1875, A borrowed from S R43,000 and mortgaged to her 10 of the 22 villages of the zamindari. In the suit brought by B's successor against A to recover the zamindari L was a party, but S was not. In that suit L obtained an order for payment of R1,00,000 of the sum paid into Court by the zamindar. In a suit brought in 1885 by S against L to have her debt declared a first charge on the money paid into Court by the zamindar it was contended by L that S could have no decree for repayment of this sum, and that, if the money was wrongly paid under the order of the Court to L, it was wrongfully seized within the meaning of art. 29 of sch. From the evidence it appeared that the plaintiffs did not intend to insure the box. The box was taken to the booking office at the station, and the parcel clerk asked what it contained, and was told that it contained coin, and he learned casually that the amount was R6,000. The clerk charged R18-1-0 for the box, which was the "treasure rate" for carriage. This sum was paid, and the box was duly despatched, but was lost or stolen in the course of transit. The plaintiffs sued to recover the R6,000. The defendants contended that, having regard to the provisions of s. 11 of Act IV of 1879, they were not liable, inasmuch as (1) the contents of the box had not been duly disclosed, nor (2) had an increased charge been paid.
